Indian troops given free rein on border

Map shows Indian troop concentrations on both sides of East Pakistan

NEW DELHI. — A Government spokesman said yesterday Indian troops now had orders permitting them to cross into Pakistan at any time and any place in self-defence. Meanwhile, Pakistan announced that reservists are being called up and that soldiers and sailors on leave have been recalled. Pakistani spokesmen reported that the Indians were attacking in several areas.

The Indian spokesman said local commanders had been given the authority to make a border crossing if under attack. Asked what rank the commander had to have, the spokesman told newsmen: "Even a private in the Army, if he is alone at the time, has the right to cross if he is shot at from across the border."

The more aggressive attitude in meeting the military crisis along India's borders with Pakistan was revealed earlier yesterday by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi in a speech to Parliament.

She said it is not India's intention to start an open conflict with Pakistan. "To this end, we have instructed our troops not to cross the borders except in self-defence," she said.

Previously, the government's position was that Indian troops would not cross the border under any circumstances. However, a government spokesman last night admitted that, as a measure of self-defence, Indian tanks had crossed into East Pakistan last Sunday.

The spokesman said it was found necessary to modify previous instructions to Indian troops not to cross the border "when opposition forces were seen advancing in tanks."

13 TANKS

He was elaborating on a statement by Prime Minister Gandhi earlier yesterday in which she said 13 Pakistani Chafee tanks were destroyed on Sunday when they moved forward under heavy artillery cover against Indian border positions in the Boyra area of West Bengal State, 110 kms. north-east of Calcutta.

Mrs. Gandhi said "the local Indian military commander took appropriate action to repulse the Pakistani attack," but she did not indicate whether the border had actually been crossed.

The spokesman said the tanks did not penetrate far into East Pakistani territory and were probably only there for a few hours. There were no Indian troops or military equipment of any kind inside East Pakistan now, he added. According to informed sources, the Indian tanks had gone about 1,000 metres inside East Pakistan.

The Pakistani announcement of troop recalls follows the proclamation Tuesday of a state of emergency in Pakistan and a government accusation that India was waging an "undeclared war" aimed at securing a base in East Pakistan for the self-styled government of the Bangla Desh movement.

Military spokesmen reported that Indian troops were now attacking in five areas, and on all sides of East Pakistan, which is surrounded by Indian territory. They said the Indians were supported by fighter planes and artillery bombardment.

PAKISTAN CLAIMS

Pakistan admitted that the Indian attacks had made "some dents into our defences," but claimed the offensive had been halted a few hundred yards inside the border. Seven Pakistani soldiers were killed and 11 wounded, Pakistan radio said. It said Indian losses were "heavy."

The Indians were reported to be 10 kms. inside Pakistani territory at the deepest point of their penetration.

Meanwhile, on the international front, France made a public appeal to India and Pakistan to abstain from any military action, and said the East Pakistan crisis must be solved politically. The U.S. State Department flatly refused to affirm or deny a statement by a former U.S. ambassador to Pakistan that the U.S. is committed to come to the aid of Pakistan with arms and men if she should be attacked.

U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers called in representatives of India and Pakistan yesterday afternoon to urge their governments to agree to mutual withdrawal of forces from border areas in East Pakistan where the fighting is taking place.

Visiting Africans present Israel with memorandum

Seek resumption of Jarring mission

By YA'AKOV REUEL, Jerusalem Post Diplomatic Correspondent

President Senghor of Senegal and General Yakubu Gowon yesterday submitted a memorandum to Israel, containing proposals that could lead to the revival of the Jarring mission. The memorandum was prepared by the O.A.U.'s "Committee of Ten" on Middle East peace and covers the whole gamut of issues between Israel and Egypt. It also contains a number of questions to which Israel is asked to reply.

The document was handed to Prime Minister Golda Meir and Foreign Minister Abba Eban by the four-man "fact-finding" subcommittee on their arrival for a return visit to Jerusalem.

A senior member of the Senegalese delegation, close to President Senghor, told The Jerusalem Post last night that the mission's chief aim was to get some peace negotiating process going, and that reviving the Jarring mission was probably the best way of doing it. He stressed that the African Heads of State had come here to understand Israel's position, the same as they did in Cairo. Their memorandum was aimed to bridge the gap between Israel's and Egypt's positions. A spokesman of the Nigerian delegation stressed that the African memorandum contained their own ideas, implying that it did not follow Egypt's policy. It did not endorse Dr. Jarring's own proposals of last February, which sought Israel's commitment to withdraw to the international frontier with Egypt.

The African panel was again headed by Senegal's President Leopold S. Senghor, whose sole top-level associate this time was the head of Nigeria's military government, Gen. Yakubu Gowon. They were joined by ministerial representatives of President Joseph Mobutu of Zaire and President Ahmadou Ahidjou of Cameroun, members of the four-man panel which visited Israel two weeks ago.

Israel's official reply to the memorandum will be despatched to President Senghor in Dakar after it is debated and approved by the Cabinet at its next regular session Sunday. The Egyptian reply to an identical memorandum by the African "peace mission" was submitted, according to one account, at the Cairo airport, shortly before their departure for Lod yesterday; according to another, it was being withheld for a few days, and would also be sent directly to Dakar.

Mrs. Meir and Mr. Eban met with the African visitors at 1 p.m. at the King David Hotel, where they lodged after coming up from Lod. Originally planned as a brief courtesy call by the hosts on the guests, the meeting stretched on to a 50-minute discussion. When it was over, the announcement was made that a working session scheduled for 5 p.m. had been cancelled, and that the only working session of the group's current two-day stay in Israel would be held at 9 a.m. this morning in the Knesset. No official reason was given for the change, but unofficially it was explained that the cancellation had been made at the request of President Senghor, who had contracted a cold in Cairo, and who felt that enough substantive work had already been done for the day.

Among the most notable features of the memorandum consisting of about a dozen queries to both Israel and Egypt, was that it completely ignored the O.A.U.s own Middle East resolution last June, which called for total Israeli withdrawal as a condition of any peace agreement — and insisted on a "favourable" Israeli reply to Dr. Jarring's February memorandum. Although the African memorandum itself was patterned after Dr. Jarring in its technique of posing questions for the parties' replies, it steered clear of any attempt to dictate peace terms.

In their memorandum the African peace-messengers sought to elicit the reactions of Egypt and Israel to specific recommendations on every significant aspect of the issues outstanding between the two countries — including the nature of a peace settlement, the drawing of secure and recognized borders, the establishment of demilitarized zones, the status of Sharm el-Sheikh, the future of the Palestine refugees, and the reopening of the Suez Canal. Problems not directly at issue between Egypt and Israel — such as Jerusalem — were avoided.

When both the Egyptian and the Israeli replies are made available in Dakar, in writing, President Senghor, together with Mauritania's President Mokhtar Ould Daddah, chairman of the committee of ten, is expected to draft a final report. After obtaining, through diplomatic channels, the consent of all the ten — or those among them who are interested — for the report, it will probably be transmitted to U.N. General Assembly, which by then would have started the Middle East debate.

Last night, at 11 p.m., the African delegation were late-dinner guests at the home of President Zalman Shazar. President Senghor excused himself, because of his cold. He also did not attend the gala I.P.O. concert at Binyanei Ha'ooma, to which the remaining delegates were accompanied by Mrs. Meir and Mr. Eban. The orchestra played the national anthems of Senegal, Nigeria and Israel.

In the early evening, the African — and the Israeli — leaders and

South Asian war

WHILE friendly governments are addressing appeals to India and Pakistan to halt the military clashes that threaten to turn into full-scale warfare; and the Security Council is standing by hoping one of the parties may appeal to it, the nature of the crisis and the political dangers involved continue to cause great confusion.

Few observers expected India, despite 25 years of tense relations between her and the Moslem neighbour that broke away from the original joint territory, to use the internal crisis in East Pakistan to attempt so crushing a blow as to end the latter's existence. Grave and unforgivable blunders were made by Pakistani leaders in both parts of their republic, resulting in the unparalleled flow of refugees to India. But India's rulers have always been so vociferous in their protestations that peace is their highest aim that their present actions not only raise anxiety but also cast doubt on their sincerity.

The violent events in East Pakistan following the unexpected results of last summer's elections, in which East Pakistan leader Mujibur Rahman obtained enough votes to control both Pakistans, and was ousted, could not leave India indifferent or neutral. India's economy was strained by the millions of refugees who stampeded in across the borders of Bengal, and in due course began to endanger the country's stability.

Even though they were Hindus, their number was staggering. The accumulated hatred for Pakistan, the fear of serious upheavals in India's own part of Bengal, coupled with the terrible strain on India's limited resources, led to a situation in which war seemed to some the easiest way out. Left to themselves, some Indians argue, they should be able to tackle Pakistan and cut it down to size."

India's superior military might in Bengal, and Pakistan's inferiority in that region, cut off as their forces are from their home bases in West Pakistan — would provide decisive backing for the Bangla Desh guerrillas. All that, however, is based on the assumption that Pakistan's ally to the north — China — will limit herself to sending military equipment, and that, if China does move in order to prevent India from using the troops now stationed in the foothills of the Himalayas, Russia cannot be expected to accept this quietly. Thus vast forces and grave perils are involved in what Mrs. Indira Gandhi yesterday still called "a local action" on the East Pakistan border.

It is unlikely, of course, that China will risk a war with Russia in the defence of East Pakistan, far from its own territory. There is doubt whether China would seek even to outrage Russia in any way in order to perpetuate West Pakistan's military and political domination in East Pakistan. It is equally unlikely that Moscow wishes to become involved militarily in South Asia, though a weak Pakistan could be useful to the U.S.S.R. in tipping the balance of power in Asia in her favour.

As a by-product of these events and tensions it is also likely that as long as hostilities continue on the Indian sub-continent, Russia will not want to become involved in any way in another arena — the Suez Canal — and can be expected to tell Sadat that now is not the time to resume shooting along the Canal.

However grave the news from Karachi and New Delhi may sound, there is still time to stop the accelerating drift towards an all-out war that would solve no problem but create many new ones in its wake.

Nixon and Pompidou to meet in Azores

President Nixon and President Georges Pompidou of France will meet in the Azores December 13 and 14 to discuss international questions, prior to Mr. Nixon's Peking and Moscow trips, the Elysee Palace and the White House announced yesterday.

The visit, simultaneously announced in both capitals, "will be strictly business," Mr. Nixon's press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said. The President will return directly to Washington afterwards. Mr. Nixon also plans to meet with Portuguese Premier Marcello Caetano while in the Azores.

The meeting with Mr. Pompidou is in line with President Nixon's announcement that he will be consulting with U.S. allies prior to his summit meetings in the two Communist countries. Asked if there would be meetings with other leaders, Mr. Ziegler said this generally would be accomplished through the North Atlantic Council at Brussels and he had nothing to report on other face-to-face meetings.

The Azores, a series of nine islands under Portuguese rule, are located in the Atlantic Ocean 740 miles west of Portugal. The U.S. maintains an air force base there.

Mr. Ziegler said the President will be accompanied by Secretary of State William Rogers, Secretary of the Treasury John Connally and Dr. Henry M. Kissinger, his national security adviser.

Mr. Ziegler said the main purpose of the meeting was Mr. Nixon's desire to consult with allies before his Peking and Moscow trips and it was "developed and initiated" by the U.S. for that reason.

While giving no specific agenda for the talks, Mr. Ziegler said that in the course of the two days of meetings Mr. Nixon and the French President no doubt would discuss other matters, including the Middle East, the international monetary situation and the problems of international narcotics traffic. He said they would discuss a broad range of economic and financial and commercial matters. (AP, UPI)

Britain, Rhodesia agree on terms

SALISBURY (Reuter). — After six years of rebellion against the British crown, Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith yesterday signed an agreement with British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home that recognizes Rhodesian independence.

Successful where former Labour Prime Minister Harold Wilson had twice failed, Sir Alec flew home yesterday. Champagne corks popped and beer flowed freely at impromptu parties at which white Rhodesians celebrated the legitimization of their Unilateral Declaration of Independence on November 11, 1965.

A British spokesman said "the terms of the settlement are fully in accordance with the five British settlement principles."

These include unimpeded progress to black majority rule and progress towards ending racial discrimination — principles which have until now been resolutely opposed by Mr. Smith's Rhodesian Front Party.

But until details of the agreement are announced in Parliament today in London and Salisbury, local, non-white leaders — like the black African governments abroad which have bitterly opposed the Declaration of Independence — reserved judgment about the Salisbury settlement.

Britain asked for a meeting of the Security Council today so that it could announce details of the settlement.

The agreement has still to be ratified by the British Parliament and must undergo a "test of acceptability" in which, by a process still to be announced, its terms will be presented for approval some time in the new year by Rhodesia's quarter million whites and five million Africans.

Meanwhile, the international economic sanctions imposed by the U.N. at Britain's request remain in force.

After the 15-minute final plenary session of the settlement talks, Mr. Smith told reporters: "I am a very happy man."

But there was suspicion in African nationalist circles that the agreement did not go far enough in meeting black political aspirations or guarantee their eventual right to rule.

Meanwhile, the U.N.'s Decolonization Committee voted, 89 to 10, to pass a resolution strongly deploring Britain's "continued refusal" to bring down the white-minority regime in Rhodesia. It did so despite having been informed an hour earlier that Britain and Rhodesia had reached agreement.

The Soviet news agency Tass yesterday dismissed the agreement as "shameful collusion between the imperialists and their racist henchmen in Africa."

China urges delay of disarmament talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP). — Communist China yesterday proposed that the U.N. General Assembly shelve the Soviet plan for a world conference on disarmament at least for the present.

In a major policy speech before the 131-nation Assembly, Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua called for a fresh start on disarmament efforts, which should be preceded by full consultations on procedure. Chiao said the Soviet proposal "has neither set out a clear aim nor put forward practical steps for its attainment." He said the proposed conference would become "a permanent club for endless discussions... and we cannot agree to it."

Meir to attend Presidents' Conference

By ISRAEL LANDRES
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Premier Golda Meir will attend a meeting of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations in New York shortly after her meeting with President Nixon next month. The Conference Executive decided to put off the meeting, which was scheduled for early next week, until after Mrs. Meir's talk with Nixon.

The reason for the Executive's decision was that any formal decision by the Conference — a meeting of American Jewish leaders representing 25 organizations — may be interpreted in the wrong light.

Riad to leave for U.N. on Sunday; Egypt says door is 'not closed'

By ANAN SAFADI
Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad will fly to New York on Sunday for the U.N. General Assembly debate on the Middle East and a possible resumption of Cairo's dialogue with the U.S.

In contrast to President Anwar Sadat's declaration that Cairo's Middle East contacts with Washington were cut off, Egyptian Deputy Premier and Minister of Information Dr. Abdul-Kader Hatem said yesterday that those contacts have been maintained.

Speaking in an interview he gave the B.B.C. Arabic broadcast before leaving Cairo for Moscow Tuesday, Hatem said that "Egypt has not closed the door on the U.S." He added that "there have been contacts, but to our deep sorrow there was still pressure, not from the U.S. on Israel, but rather from Israel on the U.S."

In reply to a question over the current African mediation efforts, Hatem said that the peace envoys of the Organization of the African Unity "have played a great role towards the achievement of peace."

However, Hatem stressed that Cairo would still refer the Middle East conflict to the U.N., adding that Egypt would "welcome any peaceful means" to solve the crisis.

He said that there "can be some kind of peace" only after Israel replies positively to the memorandum which U.N. envoy Dr. Gunnar Jarring conveyed to Cairo and Jerusalem last February. He concluded by saying that if Israel refused, the U.N. will have to shoulder its responsibility "and take decisions against this state which has been violating the U.N. resolutions."

The Middle East News Agency said yesterday that Riad will be going to New York three days before the General Assembly convenes at the beginning of next month to debate the Middle East conflict. MENA said that Riad will be conducting talks with the various delegations to explain Egypt's position.

The Egyptian news agency added that, at the U.N., Riad will request that Secretary-General U Thant report on the Middle East developments, and on Israel's failure to respond to its peace initiatives.

Egypt's latest moves indicated yesterday that Cairo was further softening its week-long harsh attitude — at least towards the outside world.

In Egypt itself, Minister of Interior Mamdouh Salem yesterday ordered partial blackout to be implemented throughout the country as of last night. The order was to affect industrial installations, public sites and vehicles whose headlights were ordered to be painted in deep blue. Salem said that a total blackout will be observed after air-raid warnings.

Mohammed Abdul-Salam e-Zayyat, the First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's single political party, yesterday urged "every Egyptian to stand up to his duty," adding that "the battle was imminent." In a meeting with labour union leaders, he said that there was no alternative to the battle.

The same view was expressed by Egyptian Chief of Staff Maj.-General Sa'ad e-Din Shazhli, who yesterday opened the 12th session of the conference of the Arab Chiefs of Staff who convened in Cairo to prepare a report on the Arab military situation for Saturday's conference of the Arab Joint Defence Council, comprising Arab Foreign and Defence Ministers and the Chiefs of Staff.

Before going into closed session, Shazhli told the Chiefs of Staff that political efforts had failed to alter the basic situation of Israeli occupation, and that there was no alternative but fighting for the liberation of Arab territories.

Cairo last night said that the main question facing the military conference was what could each Arab state offer for the battle. Amman, on the other hand, said that the main question was whether the battle would be localized to the Suez or would be expanded to involve other Arab states. Amman Radio yesterday warned Egypt for the second consecutive day against going into the venture alone, and urged further coordination with the Arab states especially for the revival of the eastern front of which Jordan itself is the focus.

Saigon sends 45,000 troops on major swing into Cambodia

SAIGON (Reuter). — About 45,000 South Vietnamese troops are involved in a giant dry-season sweep of Communist sanctuaries in neighbouring Cambodia, government military sources revealed yesterday.

The disclosure came as the Saigon command took official wraps off its new drive along and across the Cambodian border and also reported the first casualties inflicted on Communist forces. The command spokesman said the operation involved two or more divisions, each numbering more than 10,000 men. (There were an estimated 47,000 troops in the country in May, 1970, some 20,000 of them American.)

The military sources said there was a real possibility some South Vietnamese troops might be sent to help Cambodian soldiers defend their capital of Phnom Penh, which is reported to be facing new Communist attacks on its outskirts.

Sources said the task force would attempt to cut North Vietnamese supply and communications lines. The overall aim of the operation, they added, was to ease the North Vietnamese pressure on Phnom Penh by separating the Hanoi troops in central Cambodia from their supply links in eastern Cambodia.

The sources added that there are deep political problems involved in sending Saigon troops to Phnom Penh. Relations between the two armies have never been cordial and objections have been raised in both countries to such a move.

The official announcement reported South Vietnamese airborne, Ranger, infantry and armoured cavalry units were involved in the sixth phase of an operation code-named Toan Thang, which has concentrated on border operations. It also reported casualties among Communist forces totalled 36 North Vietnamese killed by South Vietnamese air strikes on Monday.

Senate vote called 'clear signal' on Phantom sales

WASHINGTON. — Sen. Henry Jackson said yesterday that the Nixon administration should take Tuesday's overwhelming Senate vote as a "clear signal" to resume the sale of Phantoms to Israel.

The Washington Democrat said that the Senate's 82-14 vote to provide Israel with $500m. in low-interest credits for the purchase of military equipment — half of it specifically earmarked for Phantoms — made the administration "duty-bound to resume the sales."

Sen. Jackson, a declared candidate for his party's presidential nomination in 1972, was one of the 78 sponsors of the amendment to the $70,848m. Defence Department appropriation bill, which passed the Senate on Tuesday night. The bill now goes to a joint Senate-House committee, to reconcile differences with the slightly larger bill passed by the House of Representatives.

Presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler said on Tuesday that the administration did not oppose the Israeli arms amendment. Asked whether the funds would be used, Mr. Ziegler responded: "that would depend on our assessment of the situation in the Middle East."

The Senate also voted (54 to 39) to reject the amendment by Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield which would cut American troop strength in Western Europe to 250,000 men from the current level of about 300,000. Opponents of the administration's Indochina policy, meanwhile, dropped plans to push to a vote an amendment designed to force a withdrawal of all U.S. forces from Indochina. They decided they lacked support in the Senate.

Mufti spokesman asks Soviets to stop emigration

UNITED NATIONS (AP). — A Palestinian spokesman yesterday made a public appeal to the Soviet Union to resist demands that it allow large-scale emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel.

Issa Nakhleh, New York representative of the Arab Higher Committee for Palestine, raised the issue in testifying before the U.N. General Assembly's Special Political Committee, now considering the Palestine refugee question.

Nakhleh said Zionists in the U.S. and western Europe were agitating for the Soviet Union to let 3m. Soviet Jews go to Israel. He cited news stories that 7,500 had been allowed to go this year.

"We are distressed to note that the Zionists have succeeded in their pressure and coercion campaign," he said. "This news is very alarming to the Arab people. We appeal to the Soviet Union to resist giving in to this pressure... (which) will create more trouble for the Soviet Union, for the Arabs and for the whole world."

The committee Nakhleh represents is headed by the former Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin el-Husseini.

U.S. holds to Canal opening as policy key

WASHINGTON (AP). — The American pursuit of an interim settlement between Israel and Egypt may be paralysed for the time being but U.S. Administration and diplomatic sources indicate the concept is still the key to present U.S. policy in the Middle East.

There are no reasonable alternatives, these sources say, although they acknowledge the American effort may have to undergo some changes, dropping some, if not all, of the six ideas Secretary of State William Rogers previously indicated were areas of negotiation.

For the moment, the entire initiative to negotiate a reopened Suez Canal as a first step is on the shelf, by U.S. State Department admission, because of opposition from both sides in the Middle East dispute. And the focus of the conflict is shifting to the U.N.

Neither the U.S. nor Israel expects the U.N. General Assembly debate, which opens early next month, to provide any solution. Israel objects to past U.N. actions in the Mid-East and, as one diplomatic source maintained, the debate will be "a hullabaloo in a glass house that never has and never will lead to anything worthwhile."

When the U.N. debate ends, U.S. sources say, they expect both sides to step back and recognize there will be only one choice to war — the American initiative.

Sniper wounds Belfast sentry

BELFAST (UPI). — A sniper yesterday shot and wounded a British soldier standing guard at a sandbagged sentry post in the Roman Catholic Falls area of Belfast, the army said.

An army spokesman said fellow soldiers immediately began a hunt of the area for the gunman who fired three shots at the Scots guardsman. Officials at the hospital where fellow soldiers took the wounded guardsman said he was in serious condition.

British troops did not return the fire, an army spokesman said.

Earlier British troops exchanged fire with gunmen shooting across the Irish Republic border and seized 13 men, including two suspected Irish Republican Army members, in Belfast raids, the army said.

Exploding nail bombs injured two soldiers in the Roman Catholic Bogside district of Londonderry. In another section of the Bogside, troops fired rubber bullets to break up a youth gang.

More than 400 British troops took part in the early morning sweep through the Roman Catholic New Lodge district of Belfast which resulted in the seizure of the 13 men, an army spokesman said.

French say hopes rest on Jarring

PARIS (UPI). — France said yesterday its hopes for Middle East peace rested with the mission of U.N. envoy Dr. Gunnar Jarring.

Asked about French reaction to the declaration of Egyptian President Sadat that renewed Arab-Israeli fighting is near, Government Spokesman Leo Hamon said the question came up at yesterday's regular cabinet session under President Georges Pompidou.

Germans renew talks on Berlin

BONN (AP). — The two Germanys started another round of talks yesterday amid speculation that they may soon reach final accord on the detailed implementation of the September Four-Power agreement on Berlin.

State Secretary Michael Kohl, who recently said the negotiations could end before the month is out if all goes well, arrived from East Germany to negotiate with his West German counterpart, Egon Bahr, following preparatory talks between experts of both sides in East Berlin Tuesday.

Informed sources here said the present round, expected to be continued today, will show whether the negotiations can be wrapped up next week.

The two sides seek to arrange access by road, rail and waterways from West Germany to communist-encircled West Berlin. Among points still to be cleared were the so-called "misuse clause" of the Sept. 3 Four-Power agreement, which gives the East Germans the right to intervene in access traffic if irregularities are suspected.

Glasgow Rangers coming to Israel

GLASGOW, Scotland (Reuter). — Glasgow Rangers, one of Scotland's most famous soccer clubs, will fly to Israel on December 5 to play Hapoel in Tel Aviv on December 7.

Rangers were originally invited to play in Israel last month, but had to refuse because of their commitments in the European Cup winners cup.

Detente-minded Soviet freezes arms budget

MOSCOW (Reuter). — The Kremlin yesterday announced that it was holding its defence budget steady for the second year running, in a political gesture to go with an era of detente.

Meanwhile, Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin, presenting the final version of the new five-year plan to the nation's parliament, held out the prospect of broader cooperation with the West.

Sitting among the 1,517 deputies to the Supreme Soviet as the Premier spoke was Maurice Stans, U.S. Commerce Secretary, who is here for talks on boosting trade.

He heard Mr. Kosygin call on the U.S. to stop discriminatory trade practices and denounce his country for "flooding the currency markets with depreciated dollars."

The defence budget, which at 10.3 per cent forms the lowest proportion to total planned spending for many years, was announced by Finance Minister Vasili Garbuzov.

Mr. Kosygin, who spoke first at a joint session of the two chambers of the Supreme Soviet, was also presenting the plan for next year. Sitting behind him were Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev, President Nikolai Podgorny, and other members of the top leadership.

Mr. Kosygin laid great stress on the need for higher labour productivity. At 1970 levels the planned output for 1975 would need an extra 37 million workers, but in fact there would only be 4.7 million more engaged in production, he said.

Mr. Kosygin said that "the Soviet Union is ready to continue veloping its trade and economic lations with industrial capita countries so that the volume of trade with them corresponds to greater extent to our economic tential and the economic pot tial of our partners.

"All this applies in full meas to the prospects of economic re tions with the U.S. These re tions have so far been develop quite insignificantly and are co pletely discordant with the po bilities of the two countries."

Key points in the Bengali war

By DENZIL PEIRIS

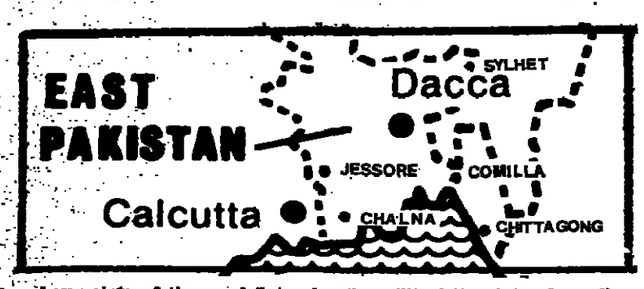

NEW DELHI (ANS). — THE fighting in East Pakistan is expected here to move towards Dacca very soon. The major actions in the Jessore, Sylhet and Chittagong hill tracts, reported by Radio Pakistan are seen as signs of a buildup to that climax.

While India officially denies the involvement of its forces in these offensives, as persistently charged by Pakistan Radio, reliable sources confirm that tanks are being used in the Jessore sector. They also agree that the operations of the "liberation forces" are now at a very much higher level than the earlier "pinpricks" and minor skirmishes.

It is confidently expected here there will be a civilian uprising in Dacca as the operations close in on the capital of East Pakistan.

One of the objectives of the present massive operations in the Jessore, Sylhet and Chittagong regions is to compel President Yahya Khan to make up his mind almost immediately whether he should talk to the imprisoned Awami League leader, Sheikh Mujib, as the alternative to a war with India. By giving the impression that war between the two countries is imminent, India hopes to pressure the U.S. and others into persuading Yahya Khan to seek a political settlement.

The engagements are still not more than 30 to 50 kilometres from the border. Indian military analysts say the Pakistan Army is thinning down its forces from the borders of East Pakistan and is moving into the four key points of the quadrilateral; Dacca, Chittagong, Comilla and Jessore. The Pakistan Army is expected to hold these four points, which have good airfields, and to secure the port of Chittagong and the subsidiary port at Chalna. It will also hold Sandwip Island, off the south-west part of the mainland, as a position to which supplies and any reinforcement could be flown and then carried inland on a route covered by the four points.

Indian determination

The Jerusalem Post's New Delhi correspondent, Trevor Drieberg, adds:

Indian determination to end once and for all what is seen here as the Pakistani menace was strengthened by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's recent three-week tour of Western capitals.

The tour resulted in two major gains: Mrs. Gandhi has succeeded in getting across to the leaders whom she met the message that, in championing the cause of Bangla Desh, she is fighting for India's own survival against a permanently hostile militaristic state. Secondly, she also ensured that in the most likely event of full-scale war the big powers will stay neutral. Only a little less important is her success in getting recognition for India as a power to be reckoned with in South Asia after long years of dormancy induced by the humiliation inflicted by China on the northern border in 1962.

While it is clear that the decisive battles in the coming war will be fought on India's western frontier, the stepped-up operations of the Mukti Bahini (Bangla Desh liberation forces) in practically all parts of East Bengal pose an insoluble problem for Lt.-General Niazi, the commander of the Pakistani forces in the province. With the limited troops at his disposal, he cannot at one and the same time guard a 3,000-kilometre-long frontier and suppress some 100,000 trained guerillas who have the full support of the people of the region.

What is happening in East Pakistan, apart from the fighting, is a total breakdown of the tenuous civil and military administration as the 80,000 men of the Pakistan Army and their 75,000 paramilitary supporting groups turn their attention to the war situation. Large numbers of Razakars, one paramilitary organization into which many young Bengalis have been forcibly inducted on threat of death to themselves and their families, are reported to be surrendering to the Mukti Bahini with their arms and equipment. The rate of defection is expected to grow as things get hotter for the army of occupation.

Pakistani replacements

Last June, the Pakistan Government sent large numbers of police officers and men to East Pakistan from West Pakistan to take the place of "Bengali defectors." The newcomers were told that the assignment would be brief, but they are still there and the emergency which they were brought to cope with is more serious than ever. There are reports of great dissatisfaction among the police, and even demonstrations demanding their speedy return. Civilian administrators, also flown in large numbers from the west wing, are said to be unnerved by the increasing bomb attacks in Dacca city itself, the headquarters of the province from where Gen Niazi, who is also military governor, feebly attempts to exert his authority over his shrinking territory.

According to one Indian military commentator, Brigadier Rathy Sawhney of the Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses, New Delhi, the General "must realize that the current military situation in Bangla Desh does not permit any rational expectation that his troops can restore control in this former colony of West Pakistan."

BANGKOK COUP ONLY PAPERING OVER THE CRACKS

Nominal head of the junta — Field Marshal Kittikachorn.

By JOHN THORNE

LONDON (FWF). — NOT for the first time, after a short-lived trial of parliamentary democracy, Thailand has returned to authoritarian rule: military dictatorship through a nine-man supreme council composed of army, navy, air force and police leaders, with one civilian. This junta, which will guide the cabinet in the day-to-day running of the country, is headed by the former prime minister, Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn, but it is likely that the real power will come more and more to be exercised by his nominated successor, former minister of the interior and commander-in-chief of the army, now Director for Military Affairs, General Praphas Charusathiara.

Though external affairs, notably the controversy over China's admission to the United Nations, played a part in the events leading to the coup d'etat of November 17, dissension within the last Thai cabinet had been brewing for a long time, and by the middle of this year it was clear that cabinet ministers were pulling in different directions.

Ambivalent attitude

Acutely ambivalent feelings towards neighbouring China had a lot to do with this. Historically "Muang Thai" (the Land of the Free) had sought freedom from Chinese domination in the valley of the Chao Phya River. Since then the Thais have resented any attempt by China to treat them as other than equals: a magnificent pretension in a country of a mere 32.8 million as opposed to China's 800 million.

Also, though intermarriage has softened the clash, there is potential hostility from the two to four million Thai nationals of Chinese or part-Chinese descent towards the regime. Many of the Thai civilian and military leaders are of part-Chinese descent: the Thai ruling elite has been formed by an alliance of money, talents and family connections from both races. But the ordinary people of Chinese origin, such as one finds clustered in the quarters of downtown Bangkok and round the capital's railway station, are far more uncertain in their political loyalties, even though by law they have taken Thai names and in many respects seem no different in appearance and behaviour from other Thais.

In other respects it has not been a good year for Thailand. A mainly agricultural country still, Thailand's farmers depend heavily on the annual rice crop. But the "green revolution" in Asia has meant that many countries that formerly imported rice now have a surplus of their own for export. As a result Thailand was believed to have a rice surplus of over one million tons, and though there were rumours of deals about to be made — such as with the Armalite company in May this year — Thailand's farmers, the majority of the country's population, have been badly hit. The ministers responsible for agriculture and economic affairs were reported to have come under criticism within the cabinet for their part in this disaster.

Praphas as leader

But since the last constitution was introduced in 1968 (and elections held in February 1969), Thailand's foreign policy has been in a state of confusion that not even the masterly manoeuvrings of the Foreign Minister, Thanat Khoman, a civilian, could alleviate. Basically Thailand had apparently made the error of supporting American efforts in Vietnam and committing troops of its own there, at a time when American disillusionment with the war was about to increase dramatically. The dangers to Thailand of an American withdrawal from Vietnam have this year become all too vivid by the deterioration of the military situation in neighbouring Laos and Cambodia. Thailand is separated from the Indo-China War only by the Mekong river, and has large discontented minorities of Vietnamese, Chinese, and mountain tribesmen of its own within its frontiers.

For over three years Thanat Khoman pursued the elusive goal of a "meaningful dialogue" with China with almost no success. Now it appears that the army has grown tired of this ploy and is prepared to do without an understanding with Communist China, presumably on the grounds that this is meaningless as long as China continues to support armed insurrection in Nan Province in the north near Yunnan in South China and in the north-east, adjoining Laos, and Cambodia. In the south, neglect of the Moslem population in the southern provinces has contributed to growth of propaganda work by guerrillas of the Malayan Communist Party, which might by now have been eradicated but for the heavy-handed treatment by the authorities of the local population.

Military rule is not likely to have an immediate dramatic effect on life in Thailand. The dramatic changes, if they come, will be when Praphas succeeds as leader of the Revolutionary Party and leader of the country. Measures such as abolition of military law in the provinces, introduction of freedom of association for workers (trade unions were banned under the former military dictator Sarit in 1958), and articulation of critical opinion in Bangkok's politically sophisticated newspapers are likely to be suspended. Aid to neighbouring countries such as Laos and Cambodia may well increase, though Thailand's own security will be of paramount importance.

Dismissal of Parliament and the abrogation of the latest constitution are retrograde steps for a country that was developing sturdy institutions of free speech and responsible opposition within a national framework. For a country that so admires strong men, Thai political life seems sometimes to be conducted with thoroughly feminine fickleness and perverseness. The flirtation with parliamentary democracy may be over for the time being, but the natural resilience of the Thai people and their politicians has not necessarily come to an end.

Manila 'survives' an election

By CARLOS F. NIVERA
Special to The Jerusalem Post

MANILA. — THE Republic of the Philippines, one of the few truly democratic states in South-East Asia, survived one of the bloodiest and most bitterly contested elections in its history early this month. In the process, the people "voted in anger" against the administration's senatorial candidates and the policies they represent. As a result, the opposition Liberal Party scored a sweeping victory by capturing six out of eight contested seats in the Senate. Although the ruling Nacionalista party, headed by President Ferdinand E. Marcos, still controls over 60 per cent of the local governments in 66 provinces and 61 chartered cities, the almost monopolistic hold of the administration has been broken.

Three days after the election on November 11, a chastened President Marcos called a radio-TV press conference, virtually admitted the defeat of his party and invited the opposition and a critical press to consultations on the government programme in an effort to effect meaningful reforms. President Marcos has no more years to serve in his unexpired second term. He is the only President ever elected for two consecutive terms of four years each term.

Former popularity

Although Marcos was first elected six years ago on the basis of popularity, issues of corruption raised against his administration, inflation and rising prices eroded his position. He won a re-election over his first term by virtue of the ruthless use by his administration of money and an efficient political machine. But after his inaugural state-of-the-nation address before Congress to mark the beginning of his second term in January 1970, he and his beautiful wife were booed and almost mobbed just as they were leaving the Legislative building.

Nevertheless, President Marcos and strikingly attractive First Lady, Imelda Romualdez Marcos, continued to rule under the illusion that they were still popular and loved by the people.

So strong was this illusion that there has been talk of having Mrs. Marcos run for the Presidency in 1973, when by operation of the Constitution, Mr. Marcos himself would be banned from a third term. The election last November 8 was to be the gauge whether the people would accept Mrs. Marcos as the next President. In unmistakable terms, the people repudiated Mr. Marcos and the First Lady.

The election was a mid-term one, following the U.S. practice of electing officials of local governments two years after each Presidential election.

Last November 8, about 8.25 million went to the polls out of 11.2 million registered voters. They elected eight senators, 66 provincial governors, 61 mayors of chartered cities and some 14,500 lesser officials.

During the campaign, President Marcos raised the issue of communism, suggesting openly that the opposition Liberal party or some of its leaders were identified with subversive elements. The opposition raised the issue of graft and corruption in the Marcos regime, claiming the President himself got rich in office. The other issues: maladministration had ruined the economy, brought about the devaluation of the peso, caused inflation, and law and order had deteriorated to an alarming state.

Although he himself was not a candidate, the President and his First Lady took to the field, drawing fire upon themselves until they became the main targets in the election campaign. The opposition's battle-cry was: Down with the puppies of Marcos.

And six of President Marcos' handpicked candidates fell by the wayside in a sweeping repudiation of the President and the First Lady and their administration.

The turning point in the campaign came on August 21 when two handgrenades were hurled at the stage at the height of a Liberal party rally. All eight Liberal party candidates were injured, none fatally however, and several in the crowd were killed. For the people, this was stark proof of the administration's inability to maintain law and order.

In anger and confusion, President Marcos, who most probably did not have anything to do with the handgrenade incident, suspended the write of habeas corpus, placed several Communist suspects under arrest. The well-meaning Marcos merely succeeded in creating another powerful issue against him. He was charged with curtailing civil liberties.

Anger and confusion

In the campaign that ensued, clashes among "private armies" of political clans and bitter rivalries resulted in 205 killed and 198 wounded, the biggest political campaign casualty list since 1967.

But the situation now is back to normal. President Marcos, who clearly saw the writing on the wall, himself cooled the atmosphere with his appeal for national unity and his pledge to consult the opposition, the press, and all elements of the community in running the government.

In the Philippine election the safety value of democracy once again defused the dangerous bomb of unrest and revolution — at least for a while.

FRANCO'S DOCILE PARLIAMENT

FRANCO — exercising prerogatives

By RICHARD MOWRER
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

MADRID. — AS chief executives well know, the legislatures in parliamentary democracies can be balky, contrary, obstructionist and downright frustrating.

This is not the case in Spain. The new Cortes, or parliament, formally opened by Generalissimo Francisco Franco last week can confidently be expected to be compliant, docile, deferential and generally submissive.

The reason for this is that the new Cortes, like the nine legislatures of the Franco era that preceded it, is totally devoid — by design — of those ingredients which make most parliaments a forum of open discussion, debate and even controversy.

In the Spanish Cortes there is no opposition, loyal or otherwise, because things are so arranged as to exclude it. Except for the regime's all-embracing National Movement, political parties are not represented, for they are outlawed.

Of the 561 procuradores, or deputies, who comprise the new legislature, only 104 are there as the end products of the Franco regime's nearest equivalent to national suffrage. The rest are Franco appointees. Or they have been chosen by way of indirect, several-times filtered elections in the regime-run labour unions, the provincial and municipal assemblies and professional associations. Or they qualify as procuradores automatically by virtue of the high posts they hold in the establishment.

Besides the 19 ministers in the government 76 other Spaniards sit in the Cortes because Franco put them there. He did so by exercising the prerogatives granted by the regime's constitution to the chief of state and to the head of the National Movement, functions presently combined in the person of the Caudillo, along with those of chief of government and commander-in-chief of the armed forces.

The only procuradores in the Cortes chosen by popular vote are the 104 "family representatives" elected by "heads of families" and married women on the basis of two for each province.

"Family representation" made its first appearance in 1967 as a consequence of the new constitution promulgated early that year which opened the way, slightly, to more popular participation in government.

The candidates for this group had to meet strict qualifications set by the government, designed to eliminate known or suspected opponents of the regime. Each candidate had to pledge, in writing, loyalty to the Franco state and to its institutions.

A number of family representatives in the 9th legislature brought new life into the Cortes. They dared, on occasion, to criticize cabinet ministers (though never Franco) and quite often they took an independent line in committee work. Democratic-minded family representatives met as a group outside the Cortes several times to thrash out parliamentary matters until the government put a stop to this sort of thing.

The constitution of 1967 which created "family representation" also provides for the creation of "political associations" (but not political parties) which would permit the airing of "divergences of views" so long as these are contained within the ideological confines of the National Movement. But the "associations" have not been permitted to materialize. As a result, this autumn's general election for "family representatives" stirred little interest.

Whereas 64 per cent of the Spanish electorate went to the polls in 1967, only 42 per cent bothered to vote this year. Of the "family representatives" elected to the new Cortes about half hold posts in the government or subsidiary organs of the regime.

Described officially as "the highest organ of participation by the Spanish people in the affairs of state," the Cortes in today's Spain is approvingly contrasted with "the sterility of the Spanish liberal parliamentary system which produced 125 governments in less than 90 years" (1833-1923).

BUSINESS COMMENT By Moshe Ater

Jerusalem Post Economic Editor

Taxing companies and shareholders

AS Israelis wait for the Asher Committee to propose reforms in the tax system, the Committee itself should be watching changes being carried out in tax patterns abroad.

Last week consultations were held between British and German officials on the future of company taxation in their countries. In March, the Bonn Government announced it would scrap its split-rate system, and adopt the tax-credit system, first introduced by France in 1965. The new system is scheduled to come into force in Germany in January, 1974.

The British, who have a different company tax (on which the Israeli system is based) are showing increasing interest in the tax-credits, and may follow the German lead. A committee of the House of Commons has already recommended such a step. Consequently, the tax-credit system is likely to prevail in the E.E.C., which Britain is about to join.

It would be logical for Israel, too, to follow suit when considering a far-reaching tax reform, in the same way that we are going to adopt the value-added tax (also pioneered by the French and gradually adopted by the rest of the E.E.C.) with an eye to eventually joining the Common Market.

Introduction of the tax credit system has been proposed by the Liaison Bureau of the Economic Organizations. But the Asher Committee has reportedly decided to retain the present "classic" companies tax, which includes double taxation of profits distributed to shareholders, though, to simplify it, it may recommend abolishing the special rates introduced for industrial companies two years ago.

Uniform rate

In the tax-credit system, a uniform tax rate is applied to profits distributed and retained, but the tax paid on the dividend can be counted by the shareholder as a credit against his personal tax. As a result, a disadvantage of corporate business is removed, and also the incentive for companies to retain part of their profits for self-financing. If dividends do not involve additional tax payment, shareholders are expected to prefer cash in hand to a higher worth of the shares they hold. As a result, the companies may have to forego their "self-financing," and may be forced to raise additional funds for their investments, in the form of either debentures or equity. The combined effect of the change is likely to be increased mobility of capital and also higher quality of management, because company managers will have to keep in closer touch with the capital market, and to care more about their performance record in order to obtain the required funds. This, of course, would be the exact opposite of the Israel policy maintained in this country to date.

Difficult in practice

In practice, the tax-credit system is likely to prove more complex than it looks at first. The tax-credit dispenses with double taxation of dividends only in so far as the personal tax rate of the respective shareholder is at least equal to the rate of tax imposed on company profits. However, in practice the company tax rate may be considerably higher. Moreover, double taxation of dividends is only avoided in case full credit is given for the tax withheld. This is indeed intended by Germany, but the French, who initiated the system, credit only one-half of the amount deducted from the dividend to the personal tax.

Another disadvantage of the tax-credit system is that the tie with personal tax liability is likely to impede transfer of the resulting benefits to shareholders living abroad. Though this difficulty can be overcome by double-tax treaties, the administrative complications involved are tremendous. As a result, the new system is expected to ease movement of capital within national borders, but to hinder its flow to equity investments in other countries. The adoption of this system by the E.E.C. governments is thought to put up insuperable barriers against the creation of a unified capital market, which was the goal of the Six only a few years ago. The issue requires careful consideration. Nevertheless, it is important enough not to be overlooked by the authorities concerned with Israel's tax reform.

Senate passes $39,000m. tax relief bill

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — The Senate Monday night passed a $39,000m. tax relief bill after Democrats, the majority, pushed through an amendment to pump tax revenues into next year's presidential election campaign chest.

The tax package now goes to a House of Representatives-Senate conference committee, expected to meet next week.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said he would recommend that President Nixon veto the entire tax bill if it clears Congress containing the Presidential campaign provision.

Senate minority Republicans called the Democratic manoeuvre a naked grab for Federal money by a party experiencing difficulty raising campaign cash for the Presidential race.

But Senator Russell Long, a Democrat and the tax bill's floor manager, declared Mr. Nixon would be foolish to veto the bill, saying the campaign amendment would lift the presidency above the "corrupting influence" of private contributions.

The amendment would allow each taxpayer to check off $1 on his tax return to be used by either of the two major party candidates, a third party candidate or other contenders.

Under the formula, Democratic and Republican candidates could receive up to $20.4m. each, and the third party candidate, expected to be Alabama Governor George Wallace up to $6.3m.

If a candidate chose public financing he could not accept private contributions.

Giant trucks and prefabricated houses solved, in one swift operation earlier this week, an urgent housing problem at Kibbutz Ma'ale HaGilboa, which perches at an elevation of 500 metres above the Jezreel Valley. The Housing Ministry is building 28 new housing units for the settlement, but the arrival last week of a group of settlers from the Army Nahal Corps made the situation more urgent and the 'prefabs' were called in. NAHARIYA. — THE Austrian-based Montana concern last week opened a plant here, its first in Israel. The Montana Paper Mills produces fine tissue paper products for home and medical uses: handkerchiefs, facial tissues, towels, sanitary pads, baby diapers, paper bedsheets for hospitals, toilet paper, wadding rolls and similar items of very soft paper. They will be marketed here and exported under the trade name Molett, like those made by the parent company.

The managing director is Mr. Yehuda Prihar, who left the army seven years ago as a Sgan-Aluf, served as managing director of Leyland Ashdod, and more recently trade director of the Inorganic Chemical Division at Chemicals and Phosphates.

Fewer privileges

The plant uses Swedish cellulose and colouring matter, and Israel-made chemicals, which together account for about half of the value of the end products, Mr. Prihar said. Nahariya was chosen for the abundance and quality of its water, though as a "B" class development area it entitled the investors to fewer privileges than in an "A" area. M.P.M. is an approved enterprise.

The plant, an investment of IL8.5m., is highly mechanized and the production process itself requires only three operators per shift. The entire labour force, employed mainly on finishing operations, numbers 70 persons. After only one month of running in M.P.M. has been able to fill its first $250,000 export order to an Asian country. "We expect to market 70 per cent of our projected output, 1,500 tons worth IL8m. in the first stage, inside the country, and to export the balance. The plant is set up so that we can conveniently double capacity to 3,000 tons worth IL20m.," Mr. Prihar said. Thanks to the know-how supplied by the Austrian parent company the products of M.P.M. here equalled the quality of the best products on the world market, he added.

The Montana company, founded in Austria 50 years ago, owns and operates plants in chemical and biochemical, paper and mining industries, building materials, mineral water and a bank. The majority of the shares are owned by the Kahane family. The head of the concern, Karl Kahane, and his brother Arian came to Israel for the opening function, which was attended by Finance Minister Sapir, his deputy Zvi Dinstein, senior Government officials, and industrial and banking executives.

Cable from Kreisky

A cable of good wishes arrived from Austrian Chancellor Kreisky.

M.P.M.'s Israel project had been in the hatching stage for many years but had encountered opposition from various quarters, Mr. Kahane explained. It entered a practical stage after the Six Day War, "but even then it called for a lot of patience to come to terms with the authorities," Karl Kahane said. "We had to negotiate with the Land Authority, whose terms were outrageous, and it took three to four months until we could agree on the conditions for leasing the 32-dunam site in the industrial zone north of here... We also refused to sign an undertaking on committing ourselves to a fixed quota of exports. You cannot do that in good conscience because the market is unpredictable... Some Asian country may start dumping exports and then you cannot honour your undertaking. So we agreed with the Government on exports 'to the best of our ability'... we enjoy no monopoly, no market privileges whatever" One half of the capital was supplied by the parent company, and loans and a grant accounted for the other.

Mr. Kahane praised the speed with which the plant had been put up and readied for production in 18 months, which in his international experience was outstanding. He is a leading figure in the Israel Bonds organization in Europe, serves on the board of the Weizmann Institute and of the Israel-Austrian Chamber of Commerce.

A FORK LIFT for handling the new shipping containers has been put into service in Haifa Port. Purchased in Britain at a cost of IL700,000, it has a 30-ton lifting capacity and can stack the containers two high.

Domestic airlines pool resources

Jerusalem Post Staff

Three of the country's leading air taxi companies — Isravia, Chimavir and Kannaf — have announced that they will pool their passenger fleets under a joint venture agreement. The near merger brings together 12 aircraft with a total seating capacity of 75, thus becoming the largest body for air-charter services in Israel.

The agreement, signed in Tel Aviv on Tuesday, provides for joint operational, technical, maintenance, sales promotion and marketing services. The pool agreement is expected to put an end to cut-throat competition and to reduce expenses and manpower through the maximum concentration of planes in one operating body. The new set-up is also seen as guaranteeing increased efficiency of services, aimed mainly at air/land sightseeing tours.

Planes at the disposal of the joint venture include single-engined one- to six-seater Cessnas and Cherokees, and twin-engined eight- and nine-seater Islanders and Navajos. Each of these planes will also be available on a charter basis at prices ranging from IL240 per hour for the smallest planes to IL500 for the faster and more luxurious Navajos.

It will be recalled that the Isravia company was recently instrumental in the re-opening of the Bezet landing strip, near Nahariya. Another partner in the pool, Chimavir, will be responsible for maintenance of the aircraft.

Freeze ordered on construction along Kinneret

A freeze has been ordered on all construction along the Kinneret shoreline to enable examination of current plans to see if they are liable to be ecologically harmful.

The decision was taken in Jerusalem on Tuesday by the directors-general of the ministries concerned. Starting today, a special team of inspectors will patrol the areas to prevent infractions of the new regulation.

The ban affects the entire Kinneret area up to a distance of 100 metres from the shoreline, but also includes the northern Jordan Valley and the wadis leading down to the Kinneret.

CONFIDENCE ASSURED

Lawyers must keep their cool

In the Supreme Court in Jerusalem
Before Justices Sussman, Berinson and Kister
Tel Aviv Chamber of Advocates, Appellants, v. Alexander Salomon, Respondent (C.A.A. 7/70).

The Jerusalem Post LAW REPORT
Edited by Doris Lankin
THURSDAY, NOV. 25, 1971

Libel does not exempt advocate from behaving courteously during judicial proceedings

The Supreme Court allowed an appeal against a decision of the National Court of Discipline of the Chamber of Advocates, delivered on November 27, 1970 (in case No. 10/69).

The respondent, an advocate by profession, wrote in a statement of appeal against a Magistrate Court's judgment (which dealt with a personal action he had brought on his own behalf) that the judgment had made a saint of a thief, while dealing a terrible blow to his victim, and that this was due to a personal grudge which the judge bore against him (the respondent). He did not withdraw these statements in his pleading before the District Court, nor make any effort to justify them.

Because of the manner in which his allegations against the Magistrate Court's judge had been framed, the respondent was brought before the Court of Discipline of the Tel Aviv Chamber of Advocates which found him guilty of conduct derogatory to the profession of advocate, a disciplinary offence contrary to section 53 of the Chamber of Advocates Law.

He appealed against this decision to the National Court of Discipline of the Chamber of Advocates, which quashed it on the grounds that the respondent's allegations had been made in the course of judicial proceedings and in connection therewith and therefore could not, by virtue of section 13(5) of the Defamation Law, be used as a ground for a criminal or civil action, the disciplinary proceedings being equivalent to a criminal action.

Section 13(5) of the Defamation Law provides, inter alia, that "any publication by a party or the representative of a party to a legal proceeding, or by a witness, made in the course of and for the purposes of and in connection with the proceeding" shall not constitute a ground for a criminal or civil action.

In the appeal against the decision of the National Court of Discipline, Mr. Benjamin appeared for the appellants. The respondent failed to put in an appearance.

Judgment

The Supreme Court, in its judgment, noted that the only issue before it was the relationship between section 13 (5) of the Defamation Law and section 53 of the Chamber of Advocates Law. The former, the Court explained, enables an advocate and a litigant to plead in court without any fear of libel actions. Section 53 of the Chamber of Advocates Law imposes on an advocate pleading either for his client or on his own behalf, the additional duty of preserving the dignity and honour of his profession by displaying courtesy and good manners towards the Court and the public. So that, the Court continued, while an advocate may allege facts which might be derogatory of the conduct of a judge, he must not overstep the bounds of decency and courtesy demanded by his profession. Moreover, the Court added, one of the things demanded by professional etiquette from an advocate is to refrain from ejecting allegations into the judicial proceedings which he knows to be irrelevant or which he is not entitled to prove in the forum in which he has produced them; while yet another is to frame his statements in a style compatible with the status of his profession.

In other words, the Court held, while a disciplinary court would not punish an advocate for complaining about a judge's conduct (which he is entitled to do at any time before a tribunal appointed under the Judges Law), it would be justified in punishing him for accusing a judge in such a manner, and at such a time as would rob his accusations of any purpose other than that of vilification.

As to section 13 (5) of the Defamation Law, the Supreme Court concluded, it does not provide an advocate with immunity before a court of discipline of the Chamber of Advocates, as its provisions do not cover the prohibition against an advocate's conducting himself in an unprofessional manner. As, therefore, in the case under consideration the respondent had behaved in a manner in which no advocate who respects his profession would act, the appeal should be allowed and the District Court of Discipline's verdict and sentence he upheld.

Judgment given on November 7, 1971.

Readers' letters

The Freud Street proposal

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir; — Your issue of November 12 contains two items relating to the proposed widening of Rehov Freud in Ahuza, Haifa. In one, Mayor Flieman belittles the objections raised by residents of that street. "These people exaggerate. It will be half as bad as they believe."

Mayor Flieman, fortunately for him, does not live on Freud Street. If he did, and faced the prospect of having his front garden sliced away and a high retaining wall erected in front of his house, converting it into a basement, he might be less complacent about the damage which will result from this ill-conceived project.

The second item is a letter from the Haifa Municipal Spokesman, Mr. Y. Bouzaglio, who writes: "The project to widen the street is known since 1950." In 1950, Freud Street was an unpaved woodland path, with three or four small homes. Ahuza itself was a quiet, rural area. Today, when the entire area around Horeb Square has been heavily built up, and the local traffic passing through it already creates a serious bottleneck at certain hours, the proposal to build an arterial road which will pour an additional stream of interurban traffic into this already over-burdened channel certainly needs reconsideration.

In this connection, it is of interest to note that, some years ago, the City authorities apparently abandoned the plan for a highway through Ahuza, and proposed to build the link to the Tel Aviv road in the area of Danya. This proposed road was shown on the city map published in 1956. It would not have passed through any built-up areas, and the traffic coming up from the Tel Aviv highway would reach Horeb Street (now called Abba Khoushi Road) at an uncongested point, and from there fan out according to destination: south to the University, north to Ahuza, or east to Neve-Sha'anan and points north. Thus, traffic headed for the north could by-pass the congested city streets. Why was this plan dropped, and the Freud Street route revived? No explanation has been offered by the City authorities.

Mayor Flieman has attempted to represent this matter as a case of a few disgruntled residents of Rehov Freud attempting to block a much-needed public project. The fact is that the proposed highway, with all its implications, is a matter of serious concern to the entire Ahuza area, and indeed to the entire northern region. The various alternatives which have been proposed to the City's plan should be thoroughly studied, if we are to avoid the destruction of aesthetic values, the waste of millions of pounds of public funds, and further snarling of an already serious traffic situation.

WAGNER AND GERMAN CULTURE WEEK

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra which, since the Holocaust, has refrained from playing Wagner and Richard Strauss, lent itself to the formal opening concert of the so-called German Culture Week. Wagner's beautiful "Lohengrin" and "Sigfried's Idyll" are taboo for the I.P.O., although composed long before Hitler's time. There may be some excuse for not playing Richard Strauss, but under these conditions, the active participation of our major cultural emissary to the world's concert halls in a concert devoted to a German Culture Week is and can only be termed hypocritic.

The night after London's orchestra's hall was hit by a German bomb during the Second World War, the late Sir Henry Wood opened his concert with the London Symphony Orchestra with the thunderous "Ride of the Valkyries," which symbolized the great British conductor's way of telling his audience that war could not destroy their will to hear good music. But the audience's reaction would certainly have been different if this concert had formed part of a German Culture Week.

SPORTS COVERAGE

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post

Sir, — I am disappointed at the lack of sports coverage in The Jerusalem Post. Sports are covered on Tuesdays and rarely on Fridays. This is bad enough, but the topics you cover are boring. Since the majority of English-speaking immigrants are from the U.S.A., I think American sports should be included with English soccer. Sports such as basketball and hockey interest many people and sports generally should be covered at least three times a week on a regular basis.

An egg for Menahem Porush

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Rabbi Menahem Porush, M.K., quit the stage of the Jerusalem Theatre Club at Soramello's on Tuesday evening after an Orthodox youth threw an egg at him which burst on the politician's shoulders. Rabbi Porush was participating in an evening of interviews which also included Mr. Isser Harel and the head of the religious group which is protesting against autopsies.

Rabbi Porush was heckled constantly throughout his interview by the audience, which contested his every word on the issues of calling religious girls to national service and the suspension of five Jerusalem Municipality social workers who went on strike to press for a larger budget for their department. Rabbi Porush is Deputy Mayor of Jerusalem in charge of Social Welfare.

The police were called into the tiny, crowded hall off Zion Square after the egg-throwing incident. They removed the culprit, and a number of members of the Black Panthers who were present also left at the same time. Rabbi Porush did not return to the stage after the incident. The police report that he did not lay charges against the youth.

National League at last

By PAUL KOHN
Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

Soccer Preview

THE longest summer of Israel football ends on Saturday with the start of the National League 10 weeks behind schedule.

This leaves just enough time to finish the league season by the end of next June, if some league matches are played in mid-week. The only anticipated interruption in the league programme will be between March 20 and April 4, when the National Team will be away in Burma for the Olympic preliminary tournament.

Newcomers to the National League on Saturday are Beeraheba Hapoel and Jaffa Maccabi, while Holon Hapoel and Petah Tikva Maccabi will be missing. The future of the latter two in the senior division hung in the balance until the conclusion of arbitration in the bribery affair involving Hadera Hapoel. The idea of having 17 clubs in the National League was finally rejected this week by Education Minister Yigal Allon. The 16 teams in the First Division include Hadera Hapoel.

Can't please everybody

As usual the fixture programme does not suit all clubs. But computor experts called in to help will not be able to solve the problem. Complications arise because Jerusalem and Haifa each have two clubs, which do not wish to play at home on the same day, and six Tel Aviv clubs have their preferred combinations on the use of grounds.

The final programme gives the two Jerusalem clubs, Hapoel and Betar, home matches together on two separate days and in Haifa, Hapoel and Maccabi once on the same Saturday this season.

For the first 14 weeks of the season the "family system" of fixtures will again be in force. It has Hapoel teams playing other Hapoel teams, whilst Maccabi and Betar teams meet as far as possible. The system was introduced some years ago to prevent the "sale" of matches, or at least to avoid "understandings" between clubs of the same sports organization at the end of the season, when points are most crucial.

Natonal League teams held their final pre-season training sessions this week, but star players could at best join only one work-out after their return from the National team's tour of Australia.

A feature of the new season is the large number of team coaches who only a few years ago were Israel internationals. They include Eli Fuchs who takes over at Netanya Maccabi, last season's champions. Avraham Schweitzer, who coached the Netanya team last season, is now in charge of the National Youth team. Yitzhak Schneor will coach Tel Aviv Maccabi, whilst the spot he vacated with Tel Aviv Hapoel is taken by Richard Levy, who has been with Acre Hapoel until now.

Yosef Mirimowitz remains with Tel Aviv Betar, Eliezer Spiegel with cupholders Hakoah and Moshe Litvak leads Beersheba Hapoel back into the National League.

A later generation of players has moved into top coaching jobs. These include Nahum Stelmach with Shimshon, Avraham Menczell with Jerusalem Hapoel, Johnny Hardy with Haifa Maccabi and Rehavia Rosenbaum with Kfar Saba Hapoel.

The taste for foreign coaches has been reduced to two teams, Petah Tikva Hapoel and Haifa Hapoel. The Petah Tikva side continues under Yugoslav Milovan Ballin, but Haifa Hapoel will be led for the first time by Uwe Klimatchevsky of Germany.

Netanya Maccabi were the most clear-cut winners ever of the First Division last season, nine points ahead of second-placed Shimshon. Led again by Mordechai "Mottels" Spiegler, and with such good players —on call — as Shraga Bar, Shlomo Gal and Victor Saroussi, the Netanya side is sure to be in the championship running again. The team will be reinforced by the veteran keeper, Haim Levin.

Tel Aviv Maccabi which finished in the tenth spot at the end of the season, is expected to do very much better this year, though little new young blood has emerged to blend with veterans Giora Spiegel, Zvi Rosen, Menahem Bello and Rahamim Talbi. An important addition to the team will be the return of David Karako, who has been injured for nearly a year.

Tips for Saturday

The game between these Maccabi clubs at the Bloomfield Stadium in Jaffa should be the match of the day on Saturday.

Petah Tikva Hapoel entertains Shimshon. Hapoel will be with National team players Yitzhak Visoker in goal, Gaby Rosendoren and Yaacov Khalifa. Shimshon will be led by Moshe Romano, Yitzhak Druker and Haim Nurieli.

Tel Aviv Hapoel seems to have one of easiest fixtures of the card playing in Jaffa against Hadera Hapoel. Tel Aviv Hapoel appear to have one of the best attacks in the league with Ronnie Kalderon, Yehoshua Feigenbaum and George Borba. Its defence includes David Primo, Yaacov Rachminowitz and Kastro.

In Jerusalem it was still not clear by mid-week if Eli Ben Rimoj would play for Hapoel on Saturday, because of a financial dispute. The team's first fixture of the season is at home against Kfar Saba Hapoel. Jerusalem Betar travels to Ramat Gan to play cupholders Hakoah, led by Yehuda Sharabani who piled up a lot of goals in Australia.

Large crowds are sure to turn out for the league opener, but they will find little improvement in the stadiums. One would have thought that the millions of pounds injected into football by the Toto football pools would have gone in part to better facilities, but in this respect Israel lags far behind every country in Europe, and many in Asia too.

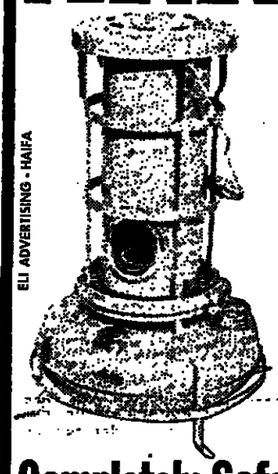

Throughout the season, Israel fans will have top-notch clubs visiting the country for mid-week matches. Glasgow Rangers play against an Israel selected on December 7; Borrusia Munchen Gladbach of Germany will be here in the second half of December; Glasgow Celtic in January; the Norwegian National team in February; Italy under-23s on March 1 and possibly Manchester United in May.

BEN-AHARON ADDRESSES A.F.L.

TEL AVIV. — Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon told the A.F.L.-C.I.O. convention in Miami, Florida, on Tuesday that "appeasement and... submission to brute force cannot take the place of peace in the Middle East."

According to a report received at Histadrut headquarters here, Mr. Ben-Aharon noted the universal nature of organized labour's struggle for decent wages because of the increasingly international basis of the big corporations employing labour.

"Pound for pound, the Renault 12 is the finest car I've ever seen"

A mechanic in our garage said it, and expressed what many of us think. Why? Because the Renault 12 is a beautiful car. We don't just mean the design, though it's a pleasure to see such clean lines. No, it's what it can do, the possibilities it offers, that makes it such a good buy. For example, it's a highly manoeuvrable car, less than 4 metres in length. But inside there are armchair seats and room for a basketball player to stretch his legs. The engine is 1300 that behaves like a 1600. Powerful. Exhilarating. But its fuel consumption is 20-30% less than that of comparable models offered by the competition. The Renault 12 never needs greasing. And it has a complete anti-corrosion and rust shield. On the front wheels there are disc brakes. There's independent suspension on each wheel. On bad roads, the wheels take the shock, so you don't. There's safety padding throughout. And many little extras you do not pay for, like a demister on the rear window. And front seats that fold down to make a double bed.
Perhaps what made that mechanic so boastful is the ride itself. Front-wheel drive that grips roads, that allows you to whip round corners without a squeal. Anyway, it would be interesting to get your opinion. Come in and look the Renault 12 over, give it a test-drive. See if you don't think it's pound-for-pound the best car you've ever seen.

YESTERDAY'S PRESS:

No fundamental differences

Davar (Histadrut) referring to Prime Minister Golda Meir's impending visit to Washington, writes: "It would seem that high-level talks at this stage are desirable not only for Israel, but will also help the U.S. to evaluate the parties' positions. It is difficult to assume — if only because of lack of time — that Mrs. Meir will be able to present Washington with a new plan. What is important to clarify are the principles. The impression has emerged of late that the heretofore basically steadfast partnership between the U.S. and Israel no longer exists. This is not necessarily so, since there are no fundamental differences of interests between the two countries, and it is to be hoped that this will be sorted out in the high-level talks."

Ha'aretz (non-party) deals with the reported suspension of U.S. efforts to persuade Egypt and Israel to reopen the Suez Canal: "While this may be viewed as reflecting disappointment with Egypt, in reaction to Sadat's latest threats, it could possibly also be directed in some measure at Israel. The temporary cessation of the diplomatic effort for a partial settlement also contains a hint to Israel that she should not be surprised at strong criticism of her position during the forthcoming Middle East debate in the U.N. General Assembly, and that she would have no cause to complain to the U.S. in such an eventuality."

Al Hamishmar (Mapam) writes: "The Egyptian President's threats of war have borne their first fruit — the U.S. has decided to 'suspend' her mediation initiative. Had Washington been consistent in her reaction to the threats of war, she should also have resumed the supply of Phantoms immediately, thereby possibly cooling off Sadat's hot temperament... Unlike the U.S. State Department, the African Heads of State have not suspended their Middle East peace mission. So far they have been conducting quiet diplomacy, and there is no telling what they bring with them. One must therefore wait and see whether they have been influenced by Sadat's threats of war, and whether they possess a key to unlock the gate leading to a peaceful settlement."

Olive trees cut up —dead and alive

By MARY SELMAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Workers began cutting up the felled olive trees in Jerusalem's San Martin area yesterday, as a flock of inspectors from various city and national departments descended on the area. During the course of the day, it became clear that at least four of the trees were very much alive, and that the contractor had a licence expressly forbidding him from cutting trees down.

First to appear, at 10 a.m., was Mr. Nehemia Oz, director of the Jerusalem Municipality's Beautification Department, accompanied by his inspector, Mr. Darwish. After tramping through the wadi, accompanied by a flock of angry neighbours, Mr. Oz declared that he had found only two live trees among the dozen or so he inspected. These live trees, he said, had been cut up in the morning and could no longer be replanted.

In the presence of Mr. Oz, the neighbours once again demanded to see the licence of the contractor, Shlomo Salman, who was at the moment working with his buzzsaw on the tree trunks. It was at this point that they discovered, and Mr. Oz confirmed, that the licence expressly forbade the contractor to cut down any trees at all, and permitted him to cart away only dead ones.

Inspector Darwish of the Municipality Beautification Department inspects an olive tree while interested parties look on. From left: Shlomo Salman, the contractor; an unidentified resident; Mrs. Lynn Broide; Jerusalem Post reporter Mary Selman; and Nehemia Oz, Director of the Department. (Weiss)

POLICE MATTER

When asked why the contractor needed a bulldozer if he had been forbidden to cut down trees, Mr. Oz insisted that this was merely a technicality, since most of the trees were really dead. Queried on what action would be taken with regard to the live trees, he said that was a matter for the police.

Mr. Oz suggested that the proper way to do it would be to mark the trees officially dead with white paint, so that the question was not left to the discretion of the contractor.

Moving out of the circle of shouting residents, he climbed into his truck to go and inspect the trees at the other end of the wadi. By the time this reporter could drive to the spot, however, Mr. Oz and his assistant were already making dust on the main highway out of San Martin.

Meanwhile, Professor Avraham Hahn, head of the Hebrew University's Botany Department arrived on the scene. Before he rushed back to his interrupted schedule, the professor chipped away at the bark of six trees, pronouncing three definitely alive, two definitely dead, and one half-dead and half-alive.

He stressed the need for proper care of the trees, which he said had been long neglected.

Shortly after the professor departed, the head of the inspection department of the Israel Lands Authority, Mr. Moshe Ivtzan, arrived. He angrily declared that Mr. Salman would never again receive a permit from his authority, and that he might indeed be fined for uprooting live trees.

He added that the whole matter was academic however, since the wadi would be filled in when Rehov Herzog was widened, and the other end would be turned into an industrial area. This the residents hotly contested, maintaining they only bought in San Martin because they were promised the surrounding area would remain green, and nothing could be heard in the ensuing shouts.

The spokesman for the Jewish National Fund, reached by telephone, said he was not aware that any live trees had been cut down, but if it were so, the contractor should be fined. However, he added, the fine was not much of a deterrent; the maximum fine under the 1926 law was IL500.

Big Tel Aviv development lacks approval

By SARAH HONIG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Municipal engineer Yeduda Rabinowitz told The Jerusalem Post last night that construction of the city's largest shopping and hotel complex, the Dizengoff Centre, would not start before the end of the winter. The project's entrepreneur, Mr. Arye Pilz, had hoped to start building by January, but his plans had been held up when it turned out that in fact his firm does not possess a building permit.

Mr. Pilz and his partners took over the land of the old Nordiya shanty town from a Canadian company, which had planned a shopping centre and two hotel towers for the area. Since Mr. Pilz's revised plans for a larger centre and three towers retain the same overal proportions as the old project, it had been assumed that they would get automatic approval.

The City Engineer says, however, that "the Canadian Company had only an 'okay in principle.'"

As Mr. Rabinowitz explained it, this in effect means that the new project does not even have this.

The question has not even come up before the Town Planning Commission, and the City Engineer and his assistants are still going over the plans. If they pass them, approval by the Commission is assured.

Mr. Rabinowitz told The Jerusalem Post that "both parties are doing their best to speed up the review. This is a large and beautiful project, and we would like to see it realized."

Work begins on new hotel in Tel Aviv

Excavations underway for the Cosmopolitan Hotel on the Tel Aviv shorefront.

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter

After a two-year battle to receive building permits, work has finally started on the construction of the Cosmopolitan Hotel on the Tel Aviv seafront, near the Hilton. The 12-story hotel will have 270 rooms in the first stage and, if permission is granted, will add another two floors with 44 rooms in a second stage.

The investment in the hotel will total IL23m. and is being provided by entrepreneurs from overseas together with a loan from the Ministry of Tourism.

The Cosmopolitan will be a part of the Atarim Square tourism project and it will be built on two levels, the upper level being on Hayarkon Street, with the lower level being a subterranean service road.

The Ministry of Tourism reports that there has been considerable response to their offer of special incentives for hotel expansions which are completed by 1973 — the 25th anniversary of the State.

Among those recently added to the list of applicants, within this framework, is the Zion Hotel in Haifa, which intends adding 92 rooms to its current 94 rooms. This project will cost IL6.5m.

Immigrant housing shortage predicted

By DAVID LENNON
Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter

A severe shortage of housing for immigrants will be created in two years' time, according to Absorption Ministry officials, if the Treasury demand for a two-thirds cut in immigrant housing next year prevails. In its fight to slash next year's budget, the Treasury has advocated money for only 4,000 apartments for next year, compared to the 12,000 on which construction was started this year.

The Treasury claims that there are too many immigrant flats currently under construction, while the Absorption Ministry say that barely enough are being built. The Housing Ministry, for its part, claims that it is only following the instruction of the joint Government-Jewish Agency Authority on Immigration, which ordered 12,000 flats started this year.

As part of its battle, the Treasury has leaked information to the press to the effect that the Housing Ministry holds a big reserve of unsold flats. The indirect source of information also let it be known that the Treasury some months ago told the Ministry to release flats for sale on the open market so as to ease the upward pressure on prices.

However, when asked directly by The Post, Treasury officials are not prepared to produce any figures to back up their contention that the Ministry is deliberately holding a big stock of flats back from the market.

In response to this campaign the Ministry spokesman has denied that they are holding a stock of flats. "All completed flats have been handed over to the bodies for which they were built," the spokesman stressed.

Today the Ministry has 29,000 apartments in various stages of construction: 3,500 are having their foundations laid; 6,700 are still at the skeletal stage; 10,000 are at the interior work stage; and 9,000 are getting finishing touches.

The Ministry is building these flats in accordance with the following breakdown; 16,200 are for immigrants; 47,000 for young couples; 3,100 for participants in the Save-for-Housing schemes; 2,800 are for home improvement projects in the development areas; and 2,200 are for slum clearance.

All homes constructed for immigrants are handed over to the Absorption Ministry upon completion. In the case of the other programmes, these homes are allocated to their future owners even before they are completed, sometimes while they are still in the advanced planning stages, the Housing Ministry spokesman told me.

The Absorption Ministry, for its part, reports that over the past 12-month period it provided flats for 8,000 immigrants while another 3,000 mortgages and other housing solutions had to be provided for single immigrants and elderly newcomers. In the opinion of Absorption Ministry officials the real need of the Ministry is for 10,000 to 12,000 apartments a year.

EFFECT ON PRICES

The Absorption Ministry says that if only 4,000 apartments are started during 1972/73, it means that the immigrants coming in 1974 will be short of housing.

The joint Jewish Agency-Government Authority on immigration forecasts that there will be an average of 45,000 immigrants yearly over the next five years. It is on the basis of this forecast that the Absorption Ministry foresees the need for 10,000 to 12,000 apartments a year.

Immigration being subject to unpredictable fluctuations, these forecasts could prove wrong. But the argument in immigration circles is that it is preferable to have slightly too many houses than to have a severe shortage, as happened in 1968 due to the small numbers of flats built during the economic slowdown. They also point out that it was this shortage which played a major role in pushing the prices of housing sky high over the past three years.

Tanker seamen declare labour dispute in Ashkelon

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The Seamen's Union yesterday declared a work dispute between its members employed on tankers serving the Ashkelon pipeline terminal and Zim, the shipper. The Union is claiming special pay. The boat service at Ashkelon is "very bad" especially during the winter, sometimes making it impossible for the seamen to come ashore at all, it was said. The Union claims that they should be suitably recompensed for these special conditions.

It will take action after the legal 15 days notice.

A Zim source stated that the service at Ashkelon was the responsibility of the Port Management. The union was appealing to the wrong address.

ALLON: Matric reform proposals due next month

By H. BEN-ADI
Jerusalem Post Reporter

BEERSHEBA. — A special committee of education experts is expected to submit its recommendations within a month on reforms in the secondary school matriculation (bagrut) examinations. This was announced yesterday by Education Minister Yigal Allon, speaking to students of the Himmelfarb Secondary School here.

The philosophy behind the committee's terms of reference, the Minister said, is nothing less than "revolutionary." The idea is to change the stress in the present educational system from specialization to general knowledge. Questions in examinations will be based not on memory or guesswork, but "real knowledge," Mr. Allon said.

Without divulging details, Mr. Allon hinted that pupils would have more freedom of choice in matriculation subjects.

The Minister spent the entire day in Beersheba, devoted mainly to meetings with teachers, pupils and parents' committees. The Himmelfarb pupils fired many questions at the Minister, ranging in topics from education to the refugee problems.

Asked by one pupil why the country's leaders made so many speeches and public statements instead of relying on official Government statements, Mr. Allon replied: "The general public wants to be informed. Unfortunately, the press often confuses public discussion of issues by leaders as official statements."

Also, he added, the press tended to play up political issues. "If I speak 40 minutes on education and devote the last five minutes of my talk to the political situation, the press would report only what I said during the last five minutes," he said. "It's enough to drive a man out of his mind."

Teachers Union: Fewer matric exams, more electives

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Histadrut Teachers Union Pedagogic Council has unanimously recommended a reform in the matriculation examination system whereby a high school pupil would have to accumulate 14 credit points through a large variety of tests and projects. Only two or three subjects would be compulsory.

The Pedagogic Council feels that most of the subjects should be electives. Furthermore, it suggests three courses of study in each of the subjects.

Thus a student can take a general course in English and win two credit points if he passes the exam. The regular English or maths course would earn him three credits, while an expanded course gives him four.

The Council also has suggestions as to what subjects should be compulsory. In Jewish high schools, the draft plan says, Bible or Talmud constitute the first compulsory course, while in Arab high schools, Arabic would be compulsory with a foreign language and mathematics or a scientific subject.

It also recommends that a pupil be given a chance to earn credits through independent work. Thus a pupil who undertakes his own research projects or writes an original paper would be awarded from two to three credit points towards the 14 which he must earn.

Under this plan, the pupil will have no more than five exams, instead of the present six.

Fine, suspended sentence for molesting girl, 6

HAIFA. — A local magistrate yesterday advised parents of minors to beware of "men who look like harmless lambs but turn into wolves who prey on little girls in order to sexually molest them."

The warning was made by Magistrate's Court Judge Arieh Kidor before fining a man IL800 and giving him a five-month suspended sentence for performing an indecent act upon the person of a six-year-old girl.

The man, Mahmoud Hilef, 39, of Kfar Otan village, had enticed the girl to a wood in Kiryat Ata in August 1970 and then molested her. (Itim)

Planeload of Soviet Jews arrives

BEN GURION AIRPORT. — Another large group of Soviet Jewish immigrants arrived here yesterday by plane from Vienna. "Itim" learned that two more planes with immigrants were expected here today.

Yesterday's newcomers included many professionals — economists, doctors, engineers and teachers. They come from Georgia, Vilna, Odessa, Kiev, Czernowitz, Riga and Leningrad. Most of them were speedily processed by immigration officials and taken to absorption centres in different parts of the country. (Itim)

14th-century-B.C.E. statue stolen

KIRYAT SHMONA. — A statue dating from the 14th century B.C.E. was stolen Sunday from the Hatzor Museum at Kibbutz Ayelet Hashahar in Upper Galilee. The bronze statue is considered one of the museum's most valuable archaeological possessions.

This is the second time that valuable objects have been stolen from the museum. (Itim)

Hospital for chronically ill in Capital held up

By SUSAN BELLOS
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Jerusalem's Kupat Holim has proposed building a hospital for the chronically ill, but has met with a negative response from the Ministry of Health and the Jerusalem Municipality, it was learned yesterday.

The suggestion, which was submitted over two weeks ago by Dr. Petahia Hodik, the director of Kupat Holim in Jerusalem, to Health Minister Victor Shemtov and Mayor Teddy Kollek, noted that there are 150 chronically sick people in Jerusalem who need hospital care. They are being kept at home because there are no hospital places for them.

Chronically sick patients who need long-term hospital care in West Jerusalem, Kupat Holim claims, only have facilities at Bikur Holim Hospital. Though Bikur Holim offers good services, Kupat Holim says, it has a limited number of places.

According to Kupat Holim, if the population continues to grow at the same rate, the Capital needs a 300 bed hospital for the chronically sick, perhaps along the lines or Kupat Holim's Harzfeldt Hospital in Gedera.

MEETING SET UP

Kupat Holim sources said yesterday that a reply was received from Mr. Shemtov in which he said that he appreciated the gravity of the problem, but that room ought to be found for them in other Jerusalem hospitals. Kupat Holim claims that they have received no reply from the Mayor, but the Municipal spokesman said last night an appointment had been set up between the Mayor and Dr. Hodik for the end of December.

A similar situation — if complicated by an administrative anomaly — obtains in the field of the mentally ill in Jerusalem.

One of the largest Government mental hospitals is at Kfar Shaul, in Jerusalem. However, admission is confined to patients from Beersheba and the South — Jerusalem patients have to go to one of the private mental hospitals in the Capital, despite the much inferior conditions there.

Technion students want more money for reserve duty

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — The Technion students' union yesterday opened a campaign for higher compensation for reserve duty. Union chairman Ehud Grossman told The Post that after fruitless negotiations with the National Insurance Institute, they had decided to hold a demonstration outside the Treasury offices next week to press their claim.

He said that each student pays IL34 a year to the Insurance Institute as their premium to the Reserve Compensation Fund. They receive IL7.62 a day from the Fund for their reserve service, the same sum the Institute grants to unemployed who do reserve duty. The sum had not been raised despite the rise in the cost of living during the past several years.

He said that Technion students spend 30 to 40 hours a week at lectures and are worse hit by their reserve duties than students at other universities. This made it difficult to work through college, and the best most of them could do was to hold part-time jobs. When they go for reserve duty, they not only lose their pay of about IL200 on the average, but have to spend another month on their return to catch up on lectures they missed.

On the other hand, if the Army agrees to defer their reserve duty to the summer holidays, they lose even more. Holidays are the only time they have for full-time jobs, and many of them earn enough during the vacations to pay for their tuition.

Mr. Grossman said that the last time he had discussed the problem with the Institute Director, Dr. Yisrael Katz, the latter had told him that though he sympathised with the students, the law did not allow him to do anything. "He told me that we would be heard only if we start a campaign. We've decided to take his advice and demonstrate outside the Treasury. If any unemployed wish to join us, they'll be welcome," he said.

Technicians strike; radio ad-less

Jerusalem Post Reporter

The radio's Light Programme yesterday went non-commercial because of strike sanctions by radio technicians. The technicians banned the broadcasting of the recorded spot commercials in support of their claim for a shorter basic working week and other marginal improvements.

The commercials ban was to continue until 10 a.m. today, when the technicians will hold a general meeting.

Yesterday's loss in advertising income amounted to some IL30,000, a Broadcasting Authority spokesman said. The Management was in contact with the Histadrut over legal action against the strikers, he said, refusing to disclose what measures were being considered.

There was no further contact between the Management and technicians since Monday night's meeting, when the technicians turned down a Management proposal for arbitration, it was said.

Last night, both sides agreed to the setting up of a three-man committee which would have two weeks to settle the dispute. The decision was taken at a meeting at the Histadrut Trades Union Department in Tel Aviv presided over by the Department's chairman, Mr. Uriel Abramowitz, and attended by Broadcasting Authority and Management, and Technicians Union representatives, and the Jerusalem radio technicians works committee.

It was agreed that the technicians would resume normal work during the fortnight period.

Desalt plants sold for $2.5m.

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Twenty desalination plants valued at $2.5m. were sold abroad during the past two years by Desalination Engineering Israel, Ltd., it was disclosed at a press conference, yesterday.

Mr. Nathan Berkman, managing director of the company, and Mr. Daniel Hoffman, sales manager, told reporters that Israel plants were now operating in Spain, Italy, Iran, the Canary Islands, Greece, Portugal and Australia.

The installations operate on the compression-evaporation process. The plants are being offered to military camps and tourist sites in remote locations all over the world.

The large type of installation costs $100,000, and the smaller one $50,000. The company spokesman added that the company hoped to sell 13 installations in 1972, and increased production would come about with the completion of an assembly plant in Herzliya next year.

U.S. unions to build housing in Israel

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon yesterday obtained a commitment from trade unions affiliated to the AFL-CIO to invest their funds in housing schemes for young couples in Israel. This cabled announcement was received at Histadrut head offices last night from the Histadrut representative in the U.S., Mr. Uzi Bloch, who accompanied Mr. Ben-Aharon in Miami, for the AFL-CIO convention.

AFL-CIO President George Meany gave a reception for Mr. Ben-Aharon at which the latter presented Mr. Meany with a painting of Jerusalem. Mr. Meany, in his response, stressed "Israel can depend on us in the future for our all-out support."

TEL AVIV STOCKS

Investment $ in demand

TEL AVIV. — The investment dollar, for the second day running, was in demand yesterday and rose by four agorot. At IL4.30, about $97,000 was traded.

In Lilienblum Street, the "black" dollar fluctuated wildly, with some "brokers" buying only at IL4.52, others as high as IL4.58 and even IL4.60. The DM was IL1.33 or more.

On the stock market, prices fell, with turnover of IL567,500, of which IL67,300 was in the variables. The general index of share prices was down by 0.62 per cent, to 143.42 points.

An offer of 20,000 TLDC caused a two point fall to 113.5, but it recovered in the variables to 114.5. An offer of 20,000 caused Africa-Israel IL10 to fall by three to 146.

Dollar-linked bonds were steady, but index-linked fell. The turnover in bonds was IL1,796,900.

Stocks up in quiet trading

NEW YORK. — Stocks closed narrowly higher yesterday after drifting back from moderate early gains. Trading was quiet.

Brokers relate the early buying to selective interest by professional traders in issues that had been pulled down with the market in sharp recent losses. They say investors find little encouragement in the news background, although many are searching carefully for favourable news.

The number of shares traded amounted to 11,920,000, as advancing issues led declining issues 721 to 651. The D.J.I.A. was up .66 points and closed at 798.63.

Pathologists' war

Strike at Hadassah followed by Sharon

Jerusalem Post Staff

The anti-zealot battle currently being conducted by the country's pathologists took on new dimensions yesterday when Jerusalem's largest hospital, Hadassah, accepted only emergency patients, because of a 24-hour doctors' strike. This morning the 400-bed Sharon hospital in Petah Tikva will be closed to the public, following a murder threat levelled against the wife of the hospital's pathologist.

At Hadassah only eight emergency operations were carried out yesterday, instead of the usual 40. The public, who seemed to have heard about the doctor's decision to strike, did not turn up at the out-patient clinics, but crowded the casualty ward instead. A hospital spokesman reported yesterday that quite a few were turned away, though all genuine emergencies were treated.

The decision to strike at Sharon came when, on Tuesday, Mrs. Olga Kende, wife of the resident pathologist Dr. Shmuel Kende, received an anonymous telephone call threatening to "murder you in cold blood."

She reported the incident to Dr. Ezra Elian, Chairman of the Doctors' Committee, and soon afterwards it was decided to hold a 24-hour strike to protest "the failure of the police to apprehend the culprits."

On Monday the Meir Hospital in Kfar Saba suspended normal services, and on Tuesday there was a doctors' strike at Beilinson in Petah Tikva.

In Jerusalem yesterday a 17-year-old yeshiva student was remanded for 10 days by Magistrate Moshe Hasson on suspicion of inciting his fellow students against local pathologists, and of making threatening phone calls to several pathologists in the town. The youth is a student at the Hebron Yeshiva.

In Kiryat Motzkin, near Haifa, dozens of walls were daubed with swastikas and "death to the pathologists" slogans yesterday morning. There are no pathologists living in Kiryat Motzkin, so police surmise that they were daubed by persons living in the area.

In Beersheba the family of a man who is gravely ill assembled at the Negev Central Hospital yesterday morning to remove his body "should he die." They said they were anxious to prevent an autopsy at all costs.

They left the hospital after one of the doctors asked them to donate blood for an urgent operation.

Meanwhile, a private person calling himself Mr. Avrahami has been placing notices in The Jerusalem Post and in a number of Hebrew papers announcing a five-year-old decision by the Chief Rabbinate Council against performing of post mortems without the explicit consent in writing by the deceased or the deceased's family.

The announcement reads as if it were an official notice of the Chief Rabbinate and is signed by both Chief Rabbis. Since only the Hebrew date is given, it is difficult to establish at first sight that the decision dates back five years.

Asked to comment on these notices yesterday, a Chief Rabbinate official disclaimed any knowledge. They would not take any action, however, he said, since anybody can publish a formal decision of the Chief Rabbinate Council.

Mr. Avrahami, who placed these notices in the press through the Dahaf agency, only left a telephone number through which he claimed he could be reached. When contacted, the people at this number claimed they knew nobody by this name.

Want halakhic conversions

TEL AVIV. — Despite the fact that only 16 per cent of all Jews polled by the Israel Gallup Institute recently said that they were observant, 61 per cent hold that conversion to Judaism should be in keeping with Orthodox halakhic rulings.

Of those polled, 16 per cent defined themselves as observant, 40 per cent as traditional and 37 per cent as secular. Only four per cent call themselves atheists, while another three per cent are "undefined."

On the question of conversion, 61 per cent were for Orthodox halakha, while only 28 per cent disagreed. Eleven per cent had nothing to say.

The preference for halakhic conversion was evenly distributed between men and women, with a more Orthodox inclination among those over 30. The trend towards Orthodoxy was stronger among those who had completed only primary school education, and less among sabras than those born abroad.

Of those who defined themselves as "secular," a full 25 per cent insisted on Orthodox conversion, and were opposed to having a close relative marry a woman converted otherwise.

Bomb hoax at Tel Aviv rabbinate

TEL AVIV. — An anonymous caller yesterday warned clerks at the Tel Aviv Rabbinical Court and Religious Council that he had placed a bomb in the building. After a short investigation by police sappers, it was ascertained that the call was a hoax.

Police are investigating.

PERES: EGYPT OPTED FOR WAR

HOLON. — Transport and Communications Minister Shimon Peres yesterday expressed his belief that Egypt had apparently opted for war. "I do not know whether it will be a full-scale or a limited war, or just a renewal of the war of attrition, but it can happen in the none-too-distant future."

Answering questions put by students of the Institute of Technology here, the Minister expressed his deep confidence that Egypt would pay a heavy price in a new war.

"Afterwards, Egypt will have to start its negotiations from an entirely new basis, not the line set in 1967."

Israel had to be ready, Mr. Peres said. "Behind Sadat's sabre-rattling lie serried ranks of artillery and mortars."

While he does not believe that the Russians would declare war on Israel, Mr. Peres believed they would condone limited warfare.

Explaining the Government's opposition to international guarantees instead of a peace treaty, Mr. Peres noted the bad experiences of other nations — Vietnam, Korea and Formosa.

Mr. Peres appealed to the students to think seriously of a career in one of his ministries. They have a serious shortage of engineering staff, he said.

He promised that the country's telephones would double in the next seven years, reaching the million subscriber mark. At present there are 550,000 subscribers with 450,000 lines. While it only costs subscribers IL450 to install their telephone, it cost the Ministry ten times as much — IL4,500.

There was a waiting list of 70,000, of which 7,000 applied last month alone. This would require an investment of IL700m., with the Finance Ministry only ready to approve an allocation of IL150m., he said.

He also announced the opening of a regular telephone line to Sharm e-Sheikh in 1972. There are 25 subscribers there, he said.

The Minister would like to convert the telephone service into a public company, but the Finance Ministry objected. It would involve paying more to the staff, it argued. (Itim)

Africans

several hundred other people celebrated Zaire's national holiday at a reception at the King David. President Senghor came down from his suite to join the celebrants.

(Agence France Presse reports from Cairo yesterday that the African leaders and the Egyptians had strong differences on the nature of the O.A.U. mission. According to the AFP correspondent, the Africans came to Cairo on Monday with this definition of Israel's position: that Israel was not prepared to commit herself to withdrawal, for defence reasons, but was ready to undertake not to annex territories. This was rejected by the Egyptians as merely a play on words, according to the dispatch.

(According to the report, the Egyptians told the Africans that they must confine their mission to supporting U Thant and Dr. Jarring in implementing Security Council Resolution 242, "calling on Israel to withdraw from all the occupied territories."

(The AFP correspondent said that differences had caused some bad feeling between the Africans and their Egyptian hosts. On Tuesday night, he said, President Senghor declined an invitation to dine with Sadat, on the grounds that he was not feeling well.)

2 Gazaites killed, 10 others hurt by grenades

Jerusalem Post Reporter

GAZA. — Two children were killed, and ten other children injured, in two separate grenade-throwing incidents here yesterday.

In the Shati refugee camp here yesterday afternoon, a terrorist threw a grenade at an army patrol, killing one boy passerby and wounding five others. The patrol returned fire, shooting the man in the leg. He was taken into custody.

Another child was killed and five injured at the Jebalya refugee camp near here yesterday when a grenade thrown at an army patrol exploded in the street. No soldiers were hurt.

The incident occurred at three o'clock yesterday afternoon. Security forces have arrested one man in connection with the blast.

3 jailed for not reporting hold-up by terrorists

GAZA. — Three Khan Yunis policemen were sentenced to jail terms by a military court here yesterday for failing to report that they had been held up by terrorists.

The incident occurred in July 1970, when terrorists held up the three policemen, interrogated them and let them go after taking their documents. The policemen did not report the incident.

The court yesterday sentenced two of the men to six months' imprisonment each. The third man got 2½ years after it emerged that he was himself a member of a terrorist organization.

6 security arrests in Galilee village

ACRE. — The Security services arrested four men and two women in Majd el-Krum, in Western Galilee, on suspicion of having tendered assistance to an infiltrator from the Lebanon. The arrests were made a fortnight ago. The suspects have been arraigned before a magistrate and remanded in custody.

The infiltrator, whose name was not published, entered the country to train a group of men in Nakhef village, opposite Carmiel, in the use of arms and explosives. He completed his mission and on the way back dropped in at neighbouring Majd el-Krum to visit relatives. They did not let him stay in their home, but allegedly gave him water and food.

The four arrested men were all holding steady jobs, one of them as a clerk in Acre, and the women are the wives of two of them. They are also charged with withholding information on the terrorist.

Terrorist, 18, gets life for three murders

GAZA. — An 18-year-old terrorist from the Jebalya refugee camp was sentenced yesterday by a military court here to life imprisonment for committing a series of offences in the past seven months, including three murders.

On April 24, the prisoner, Ali Mohamed Hader, participated in the slaying of his friend, Ismail Rehan, 18, who had been "sentenced" to death by an "underground" court for accidentally killing a fellow terrorist while cleaning his rifle.

In May, Hader and several others killed two brothers from Jebalya for "collaborating" with the Israelis. Hader was also convicted of wounding two soldiers in a grenade ambush and blowing up part of a railroad track. (Itim)

Gaza Mayor comes to work after week

GAZA. — Mayor Rashad Shawa is still being questioned by the military authorities on the suicide of a wanted terrorist leader in his home last Sunday. The mayor is not under arrest, however.

"Itim" reports that the Mayor appeared at his office yesterday for the first time this week. He signed some papers. He refused to talk to reporters about the case.

Security sources here yesterday intimated that no decision had yet been taken whether to oust Mr. Shawa or give him a clean bill of health and let him continue as Mayor.

Meanwhile, rumours apparently inspired by terrorist sympathizers claim that the death of the terrorist Ziad el-Husseini was not suicide but murder. They argue that el-Husseini, being a brave man, would have chosen to "die in battle" rather than commit suicide.

Security circles here see the deceased terrorist in a different light. They point out that he was in fact a physical coward, who sent others to do the fighting while he remained in the background.

Shemtov calls for 'war on terror'

By MACABEE DEAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Health Minister Victor Shemtov yesterday called for the establishment of a movement of "intellectuals, youngsters, kibbutz members and students" to take up arms in support of the pathologists. They are being "terrorized" by the ultra-orthodox zealots, he said.

Mr. Shemtov, who was addressing the Health Council which met to discuss the National Health Law, said he was surprised that such a movement had not risen spontaneously to support the medical profession, not only the pathologists.

He called the "terror campaign" something out of the middle ages. The zealots, he said, were trying to impose their outlook on the 20th century through a reign of terror.

"We must take these threats with the utmost seriousness," he stressed. "Once an atmosphere of terror is created, it is only a short step from the threat to an outbreak of actual violence."

"If this group of zealots thinks they can frighten us into changing the law of anatomy and pathology to fit their wishes, they are wrong," he went on.

Mr. Shemtov said he "had no reason to believe the police is not doing its best in bringing the culprits to justice (as the doctors have charged). Once the zealots were found, justice would be both speedy and severe," he promised.

In the discussions on the law, Dr. Benzion Harrel, head of Assuta Hospital, pointed out the incongruous fact that the health system would be based on a "cost-plus" basis. This would hardly keep costs down, he said. The deficits of the various Kupot Holim would be born by the Government, i.e., the taxpayers, who had every interest in seeing that the sick funds were run with the utmost efficiency.

As for the "self-employed," who had to pay both the sick fund fee and "parallel tax," he thought that the burden of paying both would be intolerable in many cases. The tax should be reduced for self-employed "if we want to keep this class of people in existence — and I think we are interested in this."

Dr. Haim Doron, medical director of the Histadrut's Kupat Holim called not only for an integration of the hospitals into one comprehensive system, but also the integration of the clinics and hospitals.

State liable for IL3m. more of Autocars credit

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir asked the Knesset Finance Committee yesterday for another IL5m. in State guarantees for bank credit to the Autocars plants, but was happy to accept their offer of IL3m. — in addition to the IL3m. of guarantees which the Committee approved last week.

However, The Post learns from a reliable source that the receivers of the bankrupt vehicle manufacturing complex, who originally asked Mr. Sapir to arrange IL12m. in State guarantees, are reluctant to make do with the total of IL6m. which they now have, and are threatening to drop their assignment.

Finance Committee members said that IL12m. was too much to ask, since it seemed like throwing good money after bad. They brought Mr. Sapir down from his request of IL5m. to IL3m., for this reason, and noted with satisfaction that an experienced managing director would soon be appointed. Mr. Sapir promised to give the Committee detailed plans for the future running of the three plants in January. In return, the Committee suggested that further State guarantees might be forthcoming.

PROSPECTIVE PURCHASERS

A senior Commerce Ministry official told the Committee that a number of prospective purchasers had already started looking into buying the plants. It all depended on whether the price was right, he said.

(In the Knesset Economic Committee, which discussed the same problem yesterday, Chairman Avraham Shechterman reminded Mr. Ramon Harel, Director-General of the Transport Ministry, of his promise that any new agreement with the British partners of Leyland-Ashdod would come before them for prior comment.)

Ya'acov Ardon adds:

News of the Knesset Committee's decision yesterday disheartened the 900 workers at Autocars' two plants in Haifa. The first appropriation, approved earlier this month, failed to ignite production operations at the plants, since creditors are reluctant to resume supplies before past debts are guaranteed.

On Monday Haifa District Court President Avraham Schaal appointed another receiver for Autocars at the request of two creditors, whose debts are unsecured by any of the company's fixed assets. The two are the Halva'a Vehissakhon Bank (whose claim is reported to be IL400,000), and a metal parts supplier with a smaller claim.

The General Manager of the Til plant, Mr. Avigdor Eilat, yesterday received a dismissal notice from the official receiver. He was employed in a senior position for six years when the plant belonged to Efraim Illin, left it before it was sold, and was recalled by Mr. Shubinsky.

The Knesset Finance Committee today considers a request from the Committee of Economic Ministers for a sizeable State guarantee for credits to Israel Aircraft Industries, Lod, in connection with the purchase of 13 Boeing 707 jets from TWA for renovation and resale.

The Committee of Economic Ministers reportedly regards the I.A.I. request as a fait accompli, since the Industries bought the planes from TWA first, by arranging the bank credit on the strength of a commitment to produce the guarantees.

Jerusalem riot over arrest of yeshiva student

Two policemen were injured and nine persons were arrested in the Capital last night as yeshiva students assembled to protest the arrest of one of their number earlier in the day.

The students streamed out of Mea Shearim and headed towards Rehov Strauss demanding the immediate release of the 17-year-old remanded for ten days yesterday, after he was accused of threatening pathologists in Jerusalem.

They started throwing stones at every car that passed "Sabbath Square" near the quarter. When police arrived they were greeted by a volley of rocks. Water trucks were brought in, but before the demonstration could be brought under control, two policemen were injured by flying stones, and nine students were arrested.

Police remained in the area after the riot. (Itim)

Rabbi's daughter turns to court in draft fight

Sareh Barazani, daughter of the Rabbi from Moshav Beit Yosef near Tiberias, yesterday applied to the High Court of Justice for an order nisi calling on the Minister of Defence to show cause why he should not refrain from calling her up for military service.

The girl's father, Rabbi Yitzhak Barazani, has been protesting, by fasting and demonstrating in Tiberias and Jerusalem, against the rejection of his daughter's application for deferment on religious grounds.

In her application, Miss Barazani, 20, claimed that the examination committee deliberately tried to trip her up with trick questions aimed at proving she was not really observant or versed in religious customs.

Miss Barazani claimed that the committee intended to make an example of her in order to "break" the opposition of girls from Moshav Beit Yosef to serving in the army.

No date was set for the hearing of the application. (Itim)

No devaluation, Sapir says

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir yesterday emphatically declared that the Government had no intention of making another devaluation — "neither in the near nor the more distant future." He was speaking to a group of Ashdod businessmen at a ceremony making him a freeman of the city.

Mr. Sapir's statement came in reply to a question concerning impressions created by a recent statement of the Governor of the Bank of Israel concerning devaluation. Mr. Sapir pointed out that there had been only two small devaluations since 1962, both of them connected with developments in other countries.

Mr. Sapir added that Mr. Zanbar himself pointed out that his remarks had been misinterpreted.

Maccabi agrees to League A after uproar

By PAUL KOHN
Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Police were called in late last night to calm the uproar and restore order at the Maccabi Central Committee meeting here after dozens of Petah Tikva Maccabi football supporters stormed the platform and attempted to attack Mr. Menahem Savidor, the Maccabi chairman.

Later, the committee adopted a resolution sponsored by Mr. Savidor that Petah Tikva accept relegation from the National League and play League "A" soccer this season.

The uproar broke out after the vote was announced on three proposals. The first was that Maccabi clubs boycott the National Soccer League this Saturday, to be followed by a national Maccabi assembly next week. The proposal received 20 votes.

A second proposal, that won only three votes, was for Maccabi to withdraw from all sports bodies and competition. The third proposal, put forward by Mr. Savidor, and which won 24 votes, was for Maccabi to accept the arbitration ruling from last week that Petah Tikva Maccabi agree to play League "A" soccer this season.

It was then that Petah Tikva Maccabi supporters surged towards the dais in a direct attempt to assault Mr. Savidor. Only the determined efforts of his colleagues on the Executive held the Petah Tikva men back. The meeting eventually adopted Mr. Savidor's proposal toward midnight.

Earlier yesterday, the newly elected Football Association Executive met under the chairmanship of its new president, Mr. Aharon Yadlin, in order to appoint various committees.

Interim report on tax reform

Jerusalem Post Economic Reporter

The Asher Committee on Tax Reform will suspend its current discussions and concentrate on preparing an interim report on work already completed. The report will be presented to the Finance Minister in December so that the recommendations can be applied in 1972, it was decided at yesterday's meeting of the Committee.

This step comes in the wake of criticism from the Finance Ministry of the slow workings of the Committee.

The interim report will concentrate on a new structure for personal income tax, added value tax, and the recommendations on tax deductible expenses.

Only after this report has been completed will the Committee return to the issue, under discussion up to this week, of widening the income tax base, including the capital gains tax.
